

STRIKING MINERS STAGE PROTEST MARCH IN WASHINGTON OVER CUTS IN HEALTH BENEFITS

Protest cuts in health benefits

Angry miners march on Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignored by their national union leaders, about 650 striking coal miners staged a protest march Friday over cuts in health benefits.

The demonstrators are among about 62,000 United Mine Workers members participating in wildcat strikes in West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia and Ohio over the health benefits issue.

After the march, several dozen of the miners met with Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., to deliver their complaints.

Speakers at a rally in a Washington park blamed the reduction in benefits on a coal industry group, the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, and trustees of the benefit fund.

Cecil Roberts, vice president of UMW District 17, called for "a congressional investigation of the fund."

He said it is "preposterous" to blame the fund problem on a series of wildcat strikes, as both UMW President Arnold Miller and the coal operators do. Roberts said the fund is poorly managed and noted that inflation has eaten into it.

No national officers of the UMW participated in the demonstration, and a spokesman for the union's national office could not be reached for comment. Miller has urged the strikers to go back to work.

After the rally, the striking miners marched from the park, past the White House and on to the Capitol. Small delegations were sent to picket the offices of the industry association and the fund trustees.

The miners told the two officials that the reduced benefits are causing miners and their families to avoid needed health care because they can't afford it. This situation in turn is leading to financial problems for hospitals and clinics, they said.

"We are going to lose our doctors and technicians and we won't be able to replace them," said Emil Martin, a local union leader in West Virginia.

Randolph promised to take up the issue of the doctors with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. "There may be some possibility of emergency aid," he said.

Trustees of the UMW Health and Retirement Fund announced in June that miners would have to begin paying up to $500 a year in medical expenses. The trustees said the cuts were prompted by the poor financial condition of the fund.

4 ex-CIA employees face subpoena in probe of drug tests on humans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee Friday announced it is issuing subpoenas for three former employees and a former consultant of the CIA to testify about CIA drug experiments on human subjects.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the health and scientific research subcommittee, said the four witnesses were being told to appear at a hearing Sept. 9. Kennedy said the four had declined to cooperate voluntarily with the committee.

The announcement followed a closed meeting of the Human Resources Committee, of which the subcommittee is part, dealing with the CIA experiments.

Kennedy said the subpoenas would be issued to Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, identified in previous hearings as the person responsible for the drug-testing program; his associate, Dr. Robert Lashbrook; Walter P. Pasternak, and Dr. Charles Geschickter, professor emeritus at Georgetown University and a former CIA consultant.

In San Francisco on Friday, CIA chief Stanislaw Turner asked the city's forgiveness for the spy agency's operation of a mid-50s bawdy house for the testing of drugs on unknowing citizens.

Turner said the CIA's "Operation Midnight Climax," wherein citizens were lured to a government-run brothel to unwittingly consume drugs, was "abhorrent" and a cause for sorrow.

"I apologize for that and I regret it," he told business and professional leaders.

Turner said he first learned of the experiments recently when documents relating to them were found in CIA files.

Big Carter victory House passes energy plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House handed President Carter his biggest legislative victory Friday by approving a broad plan designed to make dramatic shifts in the way Americans use energy.

The energy package now goes to the Senate, where substantial opposition already has arisen to many of its key features, especially those calling for new taxes on crude oil and on industrial users of natural gas.

Instead, the House approved a Carter formula for continuing federal price controls but at a higher level. This formula calls for natural gas prices to rise 30 cents per thousand cubic feet initially and by an estimated 10 percent annually, thus giving drillers an incentive to search out new supplies.

THE BILL passed by the House on a 244-177 vote sets two major goals: a shift away from U.S. dependence on foreign oil and dramatic improvements in energy conservation. It will mean higher energy prices for all Americans.

Congressional energy specialists say the bill will conserve two or three million barrels of oil a day. In contrast, White House energy advisers said Carter's original plan would have saved about 4 million barrels of oil a day.

IN ADDITION, the House passed a tax on crude-oil producers designed to raise domestic oil prices to the $13.60 now charged by oil-producing nations — a move expected to raise gasoline prices between 4 and 7 cents a gallon.

However, this increase in gas prices is to be rebated to the public by reducing federal income tax withholding. The average rebate is expected to be about $22 per person. New England homeowners who rely heavily on oil for home heating also get a special rebate.

Other features of the bill are:

- Tax credits of up to $400 each for homeowners who insulate or reinsulate their homes, or add other weatherization features. Heat lost through the walls and ceilings of residences is the single biggest waste of energy in the United States.
- Tax credits for homeowners who install solar-powered heaters or air conditioners.
- A tax on gas-guzzling low-mileage cars beginning in 1979, a year later than Carter proposed.
- Mandatory efficiency standards for refrigerators, air conditioners and other appliances.
- A multibillion-dollar tax program designed to force a dramatic shift by industries from natural gas and oil to coal.
- The elimination of federal income tax deductions for local and state gasoline taxes.

Although the House eliminated administration-backed proposals for direct increases in gasoline taxes and for rebates for persons who buy energy-efficient small cars, the Carter energy program came through relatively intact, despite scrutiny by five committees and a sustained floor attack by Republicans.

The final vote came after House Democrats defeated 272 to 148 a strong Republican move to cut out a critical tax on crude-oil producers, which was intended to reduce both oil imports and U.S. gasoline consumption.

The biggest challenge to the plan came earlier in the week when Republicans and Democrats from oil-producing states failed in an attempt to deregulate the price of natural gas.

Jaworski seeks key documents in probe

CHICAGO (AP) — Leon Jaworski says documents he is seeking from the attorney general could be as crucial to his investigation of alleged Korean influence-buying in Congress as the White House tapes were to the Watergate investigation.

"I would say they will be crucial in the instances of some individuals," said Jaworski, who is counsel for the congressional ethics committee investigating the Korean scandal.

He spoke Friday at a news conference in connection with the annual meeting of the American Bar Association.

an illegal South Korean campaign to curry favor with Congress.

Critics of the investigation contend the Democratic administration has been too slow in investigating possible wrongdoing by members of its own party.

Jaworski agreed to become chief counsel of the House committee after the first chief counsel for the ethics panel, Richard Lacombe, resigned last month, complaining that House leaders were not moving rapidly in their investigation.

Jaworski said he has received assurances of full independence from congressional leaders.

As he has indicated before, Jaworski said he does not put credence in reports that the scandal involves about 60 congressmen.

"From the information I have at this time, I would say it does not run that deep," Jaworski said. He added, though, that he can't at this point say how many congressmen may be involved.

He said he is satisfied with his assurances of independence, but if at any time the ethics committee prohibits him from subpoenaing needed evidence, he will take his case to the full House.

Seems to indicate deal

Lance quizzed on secret loan memo

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The comptroller of the currency questioned Bert Lance Friday about a secret memorandum that seemed to tie Lance's $2.6-million personal loan from the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. to the opening of an arrangement between that bank and the National Bank of Georgia, which Lance formerly headed.

In banking regulations, it is considered an illegal misapplication of bank funds to use bank monies as a "compensating balance" to underpin a personal loan to a bank official.

Authoritative officials said Friday night that Comptroller John

Heimann had not decided yet whether the arrangement was proper or improper.

Lance, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, said at a hastily called news conference that the Manufacturers Hanover internal memorandum shown to him by the comptroller described his loan and "also made reference to the hoped-for correspondent (banking) relationship."

But, he said, the document did not state that the correspondent bank balance was a condition of the loan even though it referred to the amount to be deposited in Manufacturers Hanover to establish the relationship as "20 percent of the facility," which in banking parlance means "loan."

Lance said that he obtained the loan April 24, 1975, and used the money to purchase 148,118 shares of stock in the National Bank of Georgia. He became president and chief executive officer of that bank. A month after he received the loan, the National Bank of Georgia switched its New York corresponding bank account from First National City Bank to Manufacturers Hanover with an initial deposit of $250,000.

The Manufacturers Hanover internal memorandum, Lance said, also was dated April 24, 1975.

The budget director, who called the news conference just before he flew to Georgia for the weekend, said that he approached First National City Bank about financing the stock purchase because the previous owners of the stock had had a correspondent banking relationship with the same bank, but that both parties had agreed that he should go to another bank for his loan.

He said that he went to Manufacturers Hanover because of a "long relationship" between that bank and Calhoun First National Bank, where he was chairman of the board before becoming president of the National Bank of Georgia.

Feared bombing of L.B.

Recluse hid $1 million in desert

A recently-deceased Long Beach man who neighbors said feared the city was "going to be bombed," hid an estimated $1 million in gold and silver bullion and a cache of heavy weapons in the desert.

Bert W. Bell, 76, whose family is fighting over his $1-million estate, was described as a right-wing sympathizer who kept to himself in his two-story, Elizabethan-style Long Beach home, protected by a barbed wire fence.

Bell, who died July 28, told neighbors he was sympathetic both to the John Birch Society and to Nazis, and once said he was moving to the desert because he feared the Long Beach area was going to be bombed.

The gold, silver and other valuables and weapons were found in bunkers at his remote desert ranch, leaving his family squabbling over control of the estate.

Los Angeles County Public Administrator Bruce Altman directed the search of the property late Thursday and Friday and said that between $800,000 and $1 million in currency, silver and gold bullion and coins were found at Bell's Morongo Valley vacation home.

Between $50,000 and $60,000 in money was found at his Long Beach home at 3715 Gundry Ave.

"It's the most incredible thing I've ever seen," said Altman, who on Thursday was appointed by a Superior Court judge to handle the case.

Altman said he had no idea who Bell thought would bomb the Long Beach area.

Of Bell's regard for Nazism, neighbor Brian Whitney, who lived behind Bell, at 3722 Brayton Ave., said: "He didn't think Hitler was such a bad guy."

Behind his home, Bell had an eight-foot high cinder-block fence topped with three rows of barbed wire. Another barbed wire fence guards the front of the garage.

Whitney said the fence was built after the home in north-central Long Beach had been burglarized several times.

Bell, who operated Bell Machinery and Industrial Supplies dealing in military surplus, died at Memorial Hospital Medical Center apparently of a heart attack. No will has been found and his death has set off a legal fight between two of his children. His widow, Emily, is supporting her son in the legal battle.

Mrs. Bell declined to comment on the case, or her late husband. She and her husband had lived in their home about 30 years.

Both children were appointed this week special administrators of the estate by two different Superior Court judges. On Tuesday, Bell's daughter by his first marriage, LaVonne Lawler, 52, of Huntington Beach, was appointed special administrator by Long Beach Superior Court Judge Max Wisot.

On Wednesday, Bell's 26-year-old son from his current marriage, George Bell of 3718 Central Ave., Lakewood, was appointed special

Homesick Carters back in Plains

Combined News Services

President Carter, saying he's homesick, flew Friday to his hometown of Plains, Ga., where he will unveil his plan to revise the nation's welfare system today.

During the evening, the president and his wife Rosalynn walked two blocks along a sidewalk dusty with red Georgia clay to attend the wedding of Mrs. Carter's brother, Murray Smith, and Helen Donnan at the United Methodist Church of Plains. The Carters were married in the same church on July 7, 1946.

After the brief private ceremony, the Carters crossed the street to the home of Grover C.L. Walters, where a reception was held.

"We got 'em married," Carter said to a knot of people waiting outside Walters' one-story, white frame house. He and Mrs. Carter stayed at the reception for a half-hour, then walked hand in hand to their ranch-style home.

When Carter returned at suppertime to this southwest Georgia town, a crowd of friends and strangers was waiting for him at the small grass landing strip.

His nine-year-old daughter Amy, barefoot, ran up to the president as he left his helicopter.

At the private Plains airport, the president shook hands, hugged some friends and chatted with one out-of-towner, Rembert Forest of Brentwood, N.Y. Forest grew up in Plains with Carter and Carter's mother, Miss Lillian, nursed him back to health when he had pneumonia as a child.

On the ride into town, Carter passed the Plains Baptist Church where he taught Sunday school and worshiped, and which is now torn by disputes over racial desegregation.

He also went by the swimming pool built for the town by the Lions Club under Carter's guidance, and the public housing where he and Mrs. Carter lived when they returned to Plains after Carter's Navy duty.

The town has been somewhat spruced up since Carter lived here. A fence has been erected around the softball field and fresh gravel was put in on the railway tracks that go through the middle of downtown.

This morning, Carter will hold a news conference at the Southwest Georgia agriculture experiment station to make public the details of his welfare plan. Joseph A. Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall were to attend the conference.

The plan, the product of months of staff work and weeks of struggle within the administration, will divide recipients into those who don't have to work and those who are expected to work.

It was expected that the program would provide an annual payment of about $4,200 a year to a family of four in which no one is required to work. State and local governments could supplement that figure.

Carter's speech will be carried by all three television networks starting at 7 a.m. PDT.

Although Carter was expected to work on his administration's plan to revise the nation's tax laws during the Plains visit, he also planned to relax and visit with friends and relatives.

The president planned to stay in Plains — population 683 during the 1970 census but now up to, perhaps, 710, according to a local official — until the middle of next week, or possibly longer, staff members said. He first returned to his home town as president in February, a month after he was inaugurated.

He went back there for one day in May, after an extended Memorial Day weekend at St. Simon's Island, a Georgia coastal resort.

Smith, 46, whose wedding the president flew to Georgia to attend, is a teacher at Tri-County High School in Draneville, Ga. His 26-year-old bride will teach there this autumn.

Mrs. Carter's family is having a reunion this weekend in Plains, where her mother, Mrs. Allie Smith, ran the post office until last year. The Smith family attends the Methodist church, and the president and Mrs. Carter are expected to go to services there Sunday rather than to the Plains Baptist Church, which has been in turmoil over the proposed membership of blacks.

PRESIDENT CARTER rolls up his sleeves on a steamy summer evening as he and wife Rosalynn leave the wedding of her brother, Murray Smith, and walk to a private reception in Plains.

No defector visit

Fan Yuan-Yen the MIG-19 pilot who defected from the Chinese air force to Taiwan last month, has turned down an invitation to visit the United States.

Eight conservative congressmen extended the invitation, but Fan turned it down for fear of embarrassing the U.S. government before Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance visits Peking later this month.

"If I visit the United States at this juncture it might add some difficulty to the U.S. government and it might not be welcomed," he wrote to the congressmen.

Saxbe sells out

Former Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe and his wife, Dolly, are selling off everything, including the kitchen sink, at a giant garage sale next week.

Among the items to be sold Aug. 12 and 13 are such items as doors and window frames from their 160-year-old farmhouse in Mechanicsburg, Ohio, which the Saxbes are remodeling.

They also hope to get rid of an Indian brass teakettle, a Russian samovar acquired in North Africa, a Nepalese gorkha hat and an antique sink. Saxbe is a former ambassador to India.

Too much energy

James R. Schlesinger, the first secretary of energy, noted "this excess of solar energy" at his swearing-in ceremony Friday in the White House Rose Garden on a sunny, hot, humid afternoon.

Schlesinger, who has been President Carter's energy adviser, was formally named to the post Thursday after Carter signed a bill creating the new Cabinet department — the 12th, and the first new one in 11 years.

Mrs. Schlesinger held a Bible while Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell administered the oath of office before some 100 persons.

Fugitive caught

One of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives has been captured in Los Angeles.

Robert Gerald Davis, 29, went peacefully with FBI agents who appeared at his Venice apartment at 3:45 a.m. Friday. He was arraigned for his alleged unlawful flight to escape prosecution, and put in the custody of a U.S. marshal in lieu of $250,000 bail.

Davis allegedly killed a 13-year-old boy during a $10,000 grocery store robbery in Camden, N.J., three years ago. Five other customers in the store were seriously wounded.

Blake divorce

Robert Blake, the 43-year-old star of the television series "Baretta," has filed for divorce from his wife, Sondra Kerr Blake, 40.

Blake cited irreconcilable differences in a Los Angeles Superior Court suit.

He asked for joint custody of his two children, Noah, 12 and Delilah, 10.

The Blakes have been married since 1964. It was his first marriage and his wife's second. Mrs. Blake has been a guest star on "Baretta."

Lunt eulogized

Actor Alfred Lunt, who teamed with his wife Lynn Fontanne to provide Broadway with some of its greatest moments, was buried in Milwaukee Friday after a private ceremony where he was eulogized as a man of unmatched dramatic skill.

None of the Lunts' famous show business friends were among the mourners at the ceremony.

Lunt, 84, died Wednesday in the Chicago hospital where he underwent surgery for bladder cancer last month. His wife, now 90, sat in the front row at the service performed by an Episcopal priest.

Youth-job bill signed

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter Friday signed a bill meant to ease the plight of unemployed youths, and said it showed the concern of his own administration and of Congress in helping the poor and blacks.

Three black leaders invited to the White House for the bill-signing ceremony sent substitutes instead, but one of them, Vernon Jordan of the Urban League, denied that any snub of the president was intended.

The measure will set in motion a $1-billion program to offer jobs and job training to about 200,000 young people, among whom unemployment is very high, including 35,000 members of a proposed Youth Adult Conservation Corps patterned after the Civilian Conservation Corps created in the Depression era.

Tanzanian leader

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Friday that he and President Julius K. Nyerere of Tanzania had reached "almost complete agreement" about the diplomatic course to be followed in trying to bring majority rule and legal independence to Rhodesia and Namibia.

The president gave his optimistic assessment to newsmen on the White House lawn after saying goodbye to Nyerere at the end of two days of conversations devoted almost entirely to the problems of southern Africa.

Nyerere then flew to Los Angeles, where he was to spend the weekend as the official guest of Mayor Tom Bradley.

Vance vows peace success

AMMAN, Jordan — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance vowed to find a "necessary consensus" for an Arab-Israeli settlement, and aides said Friday he might adopt the shuttle-diplomacy style of his predecessor, Henry Kissinger, to obtain it.

While Vance met with King Hussein, President Carter said in Washington he still thought a Geneva peace conference could be held this year.

U.S. officials said Vance may lengthen his six-nation, 12-day Middle East mission to revisit Arab capitals next week in an attempt to free the present deadlock in peace negotiations.

O'Neill OKs reform

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill endorsed proposals Friday to create a powerful new administrator and an independent auditor for the House. The administrator, paid about $52,500 a year or more, would keep up the buildings and grounds, handle pay and allowances for the 11,000 employees, and run House services.

Illegal wiretap costs Nixon and aides $5

WASHINGTON — Former President Nixon and two top aides were ordered Friday to pay a total of $5 to a former National Security Council aide for an illegal wiretap on his home.

U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith, Jr., ordered Nixon, former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, and onetime presidential aide H.R. Haldeman to pay Morton Halperin and four members of his family.

Smith said nominal damages were awarded because even Halperin admitted the illegal taps had not cost him loss of income or employment.

Haldeman and Mitchell are serving jail terms for their roles in the Watergate scandals.

Halperin said he would appeal the ruling because the award was insufficient to stop similar illegal acts by government officials in the future.

Movable home

Some years ago, I bought a lot in Lake Elsinore with the idea of placing a mobile home on it after I retire. But I've found out that California has a law prohibiting people from doing this on lots within any city's boundaries. My lot has no sewer or electricity lines, so I don't see how it can be considered a city area. I think this law is ridiculous and I'd like to know what can be done to get it changed. C.L., Cudahy.

There is no such state law. Placing mobile homes on vacant lots is regulated by local ordinance and only a few counties in the state permit it. Section 430 of the Lake Elsinore Municipal Code prohibits placing a house trailer on any lot within the city limits unless the property is located in a special mobile home subdivision and apparently yours is not. In Lake Elsinore, there are three such subdivisions where individuals own the lots under their mobile homes.

There also are county areas near Lake Elsinore, Perris and Hemet where a person can buy a parcel of land and live in a mobile home on it. You might be able to sell your lot and buy another one that is zoned for mobile homes. To determine if a particular parcel falls in this category, contact the Riverside County Planning Department's Zoning Division, 4080 Lemon St., Riverside, Calif. 92501 (714) 787-6418 before you buy. Riverside County is the closest area we could find that permits this type of residential arrangement.

Fund raiser

Several days ago my husband received two special offers at his place of business. One was for a "Family Fun Party at Disneyland" for $5.75 per person. The price includes free parking, entrance and unlimited use of all attractions in the park. The other offer was a similar cut-rate deal at Knott's Berry Farm.

These events are being sponsored by something called NVJCC and FFR in Granada Hills, and I notice they used a nonprofit organization postal meter. Who are NVJCC and FFR? Mrs. A.A.S., Long Beach.

The sponsoring agency is the nonprofit North Valley Jewish Community Center. Family Fun Recreation is an NVJCC spin-off group designed to run programs on Saturday, which is the Jewish sabbath and technically a day when such activities should not be planned.

These events at major Southland amusement parks constitute the center's main fund-raising campaign, said Don Morton, director of the center. He said this is the center's 10th year of fund raising in this manner, with the center sponsoring 8 to 10 events annually. NVJCC receives 50 cents for each ticket sold, and nets about $20,000 a year.

He said they have extensive mailing lists of all categories, and often try to limit the parties to certain types of groups, such as foster families, doctors or companies with a certain number of employees or in certain types of business. The parties are planned in cooperation with the parks during the off-season months.

No pay

I'm a self-employed beautician and I worked twice a month at the Crestwood Convalescent Hospital, 1775 Chestnut Ave., for two months. The first month, the hospital paid me two weeks late, and I've been trying since February to get paid for the second month.

The hospital owes me $100. I've turned over my work time slips to the bookkeeper, but she just keeps giving me excuses. The hospital was damaged in the tornado that struck Long Beach in May, and the patients have been moved to another hospital. I've tried to file a small claims action, but I can't because I don't know the names of the owners and no one at the hospital will tell me. Can Action Line help? M.A., Long Beach.

No. After several unsuccessful attempts to contact her through an answering service, we finally reached the hospital's administrator, who identified herself only as Mrs. Weisman, and she curtly told us that she has no record of your work. We also attempted to reach a reported owner of the hospital, but were unsuccessful.

Judge urges Van Houten jury to 'try again before giving up'

Associated Press

The judge in the Leslie Van Houten trial, pressing for a verdict, ordered the deadlocked jury again Friday to continue deliberations "for a reasonable time" before giving up.

Miss Van Houten's attorney complained outside Los Angeles Superior Court that the stern instructions to the jury "may be coercive."

But the prosecutor, who urged the continued talks, told reporters he hoped for some resolution of the trial, which he said has cost the taxpayers $1 million.

"We don't need another $1 million trial," said Deputy Dist. Atty. Stephen Kay.

Miss Van Houten, 27, is charged with murder and conspiracy in the 1969 Tate-LaBianca murders. She was convicted in 1971 but was granted a new trial because her attorney died on a camping trip during the first trial.

The seven women and five men of the jury returned to court after sending word for a second time that they were hopelessly deadlocked.

"We have arrived at the conclusion that further deliberations will not result in the conversion of any juror's vote," the jury said in a note to the judge.

They reported they had taken two ballots since Thursday when they first reported their impasse.

Judge Edward Hinz

then yielded to the prosecutor's request and gave jurors a lengthy instruction known as "the dynamite instruction" intended to break deadlocks.

He told jurors that "in all cases, absolute certainty cannot be attained or expected."

He urged each juror to "pay proper respect to each other's opinion" and re-evaluate whether "a doubt they may hold is a reasonable doubt."

"You should consider that the case at some time must be decided," the judge said. "And that you are selected in the same manner and from the same source from which any future jury must be selected."

He said that no other jury could make a better decision.

He concluded by telling the jurors that "it is your duty to decide the case; if you can conscientiously do so."

The jury, which has been deliberating for 24 days, was scheduled to convene today.

They had reported earlier that they were split three ways on the question of whether to convict Miss Van Houten on first-degree murder, second-degree murder or manslaughter.

DA's office denies that girl's dad asked for Polanski plea bargain

Associated Press

The district attorney's office Friday denied a report that a plea bargain with movie director Roman Polanski was worked out as the result of a letter from the father of a 13-year-old girl Polanski is charged with drugging and raping.

"We have received absolutely no communication from anyone claiming to be the girl's father," said Carol Welch, a spokesman for Dist. Atty.

John Van de Kamp.

Television station KNXT had reported Friday that the district attorney's office had received a letter from the girl's father, described as a "wealthy Eastern lawyer," requesting an out-of-court settlement.

But spokesmen for Van de Kamp's office termed the story "absolutely false."

The secret plea bargain, arranged through Polanski's attorney, was announced by the district attorney's office Thursday. But details of the agreement were not to be revealed until a hearing Monday.

Polanski had been charged with six counts, ranging from rape by the use of drugs to sexual perversion. If convicted on all six counts, Polanski could have faced 10 years to life in prison. He could receive up to three years in prison for one count of intercourse with a minor.

Hope revives burned-out 'dream house'

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope's fire-ravaged "dream house" is going to be rebuilt, his architect said Friday, and it will have a price tag "considerably less" than the first home's estimated $3-million cost.

That was the word from architect John Lautner of Hollywood, who planned the domelike hillside structure that was gutted by fire during construction in June 1973.

Lautner submitted plans in late July for reconstruction of the home, whose first version was estimated at $3 million.

Sparks from a welder's torch reportedly touched off the blaze that reduced the partly constructed house to ashes, leaving only the large, steel shell, valued at $350,000.

Sid Summers, the city's chief building inspector, said a building permit could be issued within a week if the design of the shell complies with its earlier approval.

DURING A "limbo" period in which Hope considered what to do with the house, residents of the nearby Southridge area complained that the burned-out skeleton was an eyesore and affected their property values.

Reconstruction of the 77-year-old entertainer's home was delayed for various reasons, including the death of interior decorator Arthur Elrod and tests to see if the steel structure still was useable.

Hope's attorney, Herbert Bernhard, said a $2 million lawsuit is pending to determine who was responsible for the fire. A January 24, 1978, trial date has been set, he said.

Architect Lautner declined to reveal the house's revised price-tag, saying it is a "private matter" of the Hopes. He did note it is "considerably less" than the original multimillion-dollar estimate.

Long fight on air law over

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation giving auto makers, industries and cities more time to meet tough air pollution standards is awaiting President Carter's signature.

Congress took final action on the set of Clean Air Act amendments Thursday night, ending a 2-year battle between environmentalists and allies of the automakers, and sent the measure to the president's desk. He is expected to sign it.

UNDER THE bill, existing standards for automobile pollution would be frozen for two additional years to give the industry more time to develop less expensive and more efficient pollution control technology.

Beginning with 1980 models, tighter controls would be phased in. Under the old law, the stiffer standards were to take effect on models for 1978, a deadline the industry says it has been unable to meet.

Although the industry fought for an even longer postponement, it alleged that without some extension it would be unable to ship 1978 model cars, now in production, to showrooms.

Both environmentalists and the auto industry ultimately backed the compromise, although with little enthusiasm.

MANY longtime members of Congress called the Clean Air Act the most heavily lobbied piece of legislation in decades.

The legislation also eases controls on industrial air pollution. It makes it easier for new industries to move into areas unable to meet clean air standards and gives those areas until 1987, under certain circumstances, to meet the standards.

Senate OKs curbs on bill collectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Friday passed a bill to prohibit such harassing tactics by bill collectors as abusive language, threats of violence and 3 a.m. telephone calls.

The bill, passed by voice vote, now goes to conference with the House, which has passed a similar bill.

The Senate Banking Committee earlier had determined that abuse by collection agencies "is widespread and a serious national problem." Last year, more than $5 billion in debts were turned over to collection agencies.

The committee determined that creditors generally are restrained in their collection practices by their desire to preserve the customer's good will.

But collection agencies, which usually keep 50 percent of whatever they collect, have "an incentive to collect by any means," the panel said.

Among other practices that would be prohibited by the bill are publishing "shame lists" that show who owes money, impersonating an attorney or government official to collect a debt, misrepresenting a consumer's legal rights and disclosing the consumer's financial affairs to third persons.

The bill says a court can fine any debt collector who violates the standards: up to $1,000 plus any actual damages he caused.

The bill would establish the first federal standards for bill collectors. Thirty-seven states have laws regulating collection practices, but these often are avoided by telephoning across a state line.

It also extends deadlines for factories, especially for those shifting to coal.

And it offers new protection to areas that now have clean air, primarily in the West. Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, threatened to filibuster the bill Thursday night over this provision, charging it would restrict western industrial growth.

BUT GARN abandoned the attempt. He said Friday one reason was because he had received assurances from the bill's floor manager, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, that such growth could be permitted.

He said Muskie told him that small areas of regions intended to be preserved as clean-air zones could be redesignated, in some cases, to permit industrial facilities.

Garn also conceded Thursday night that he did not have enough support to fight off a vote for cloture, a procedure to terminate filibusters.

Walkout deadline set at midnight tonight

Federal mediators step in to try to avert telephone strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal mediators stepped into contract talks Friday night in an effort to avoid a nationwide strike of 700,000 telephone company workers against the Bell System, scheduled for midnight tonight.

"Federal mediation is now involved. Conversations are going to continue," a spokesman for the Communications Workers of America said.

Earlier, the CWA and two smaller unions rejected as inadequate a new wage offer from management. But the CWA spokesman said bargaining would "continue around the clock if necessary."

HE SAID the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service "asked to come in" to the negotiations.

As talks continued with an all-night bargaining session considered likely, both sides repeated statements made previously about the prospects for a strike. A union leader said a strike is "almost inevitable," but company officials predicted a settlement could be reached before the current three-year contracts expire at midnight today.

William P. Mullane, an assistant vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., noted the CWA's agreement to keep talking and said, "That doesn't sound like a saber-rattling response."

Details of the new offer were not disclosed, but Mullane said it represented an "improvement" over the company's original proposal and "contained some new components."

CWA President Glenn E. Watts had warned Thursday that a strike was "almost inevitable" unless there was some "dramatic breakthrough" before the strike deadline. He predicted a strike would last for "months."

Watts also said his members would not settle for anything substantially less than the money packages won by auto and steel unions the past year. These settlements amounted to roughly 30 percent, spread over three years.

Involved in the talks with the CWA and its 500,000 Bell System employees are the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with 120,000 and the Telecommunications International Union with 70,000. All have said they will walk out beginning at 12:01 a.m. local time Sunday.

Bell's latest offer, made as talks resumed Friday following a two-day recess, presumably addressed the unions' key demand for improved "job security."

Company payrolls have been trimmed of nearly 100,000 workers over the last three years and the unions want progress toward a shorter work week to spread jobs among more people, retraining and supplementary pensions for early retirement.

The Bell System's original offer of July 21 was immediately rejected. It contained variable wage increases of up to 19.2 percent over three years, but made no mention of better job-security provisions sought by the unions.

Weekly wages now range from $120 for a starting telephone operator in Birmingham, Ala., to $333.50 for experienced craft workers in New York City.

A STRIKE isn't expected to have any immediate impact on dialed telephone calls. But company and union officials say there would be "a substantial interruption" of new equipment installations and repair of existing equipment, and that the 4.8 million average daily operator-assisted calls would be harder to make.

Security aid bill signed, but . . .

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter Friday signed a bill authorizing $3.2 billion in security assistance for other countries, but expressed serious concern about provisions in the legislation that allow Congress to veto his actions.

He said the provisions let Congress prevent law, full presidential action simply by adopting a concurrent resolution of disapproval.

The provisions raise major constitutional questions, Carter said. "They also have the potential of involving Congress in the execution of the laws, a responsibility reserved for the president under the Constitution," he said.

THE PRESIDENT added that he was signing the bill because of its importance to U.S. foreign relations and national security, but said he intended "to preserve the constitutional authority of the president."

President Ford expressed similar reservations over provisions in a previous bill, saying the president is supposed to set foreign policy.

Carter said the programs made possible by the bill include military assistance, international military education and training and foreign military sales.

"The bill gives the United States an important tool with which to help meet reasonable and legitimate defense needs of our friends and allies," he said. "Such help contributes to our own security."

The measure places limitations on the use of certain funds and specifies the countries in which the United States may maintain military assistance advisory groups.

It provides that Congress, by concurrent resolution, may block presidentially approved transfers of U.S. military equipment and services to third countries and certain export licenses.

Family shack condemned —'Pioneer days are over'

ST. FRANCIS, Minn. (AP) — The plastic-walled, tin-roofed shack in which the Crenshaw family has taken up residence is "not fit for human habitation" and must come down, the mayor says.

"I would say fine and dandy, if you lived up north with the Indians. But in this day and age we're just not in that pioneer spirit," said Ray Jones, mayor of this community of 897 persons about 40 miles north of Minneapolis.

"It doesn't fit the criteria," he said. "No way. It's got no stool, no running water, no nothing. It could catch on fire or collapse and smother all three of them."

Dean and Betty Crenshaw put up the one-room shack — a simple wooden frame with plastic sheets attached to the sides and a strip of tin on top — on a five-acre lot they purchased recently on the Rum River for $50 down and $50 a month. They said they are living there with their 2-year-old son Deven while building a permanent home on the property.

"They're not living up to what they told us," said the mayor. "They said they'd use the place for storage and stay on weekends when they were working on the house."

The Crenshaws, who moved here from Choctaw, Okla., three years ago, have sold the trailer-home they used to live in. Crenshaw, 32, works in a meat packing plant.

The city's building inspector told the couple Wednesday that he would tear the shack down today unless the Crenshaws did it themselves. Jones says they should be given a little more time.

Mrs. Crenshaw said the family can't afford to live in motels and she doesn't want to impose on friends for lodging.

"I've lived all over the United States, but I've never been hassled like this," said Mrs. Crenshaw. "Some people with a little authority have let it go to their heads, so they're just pushing the little people around."

"I used to live in Thailand (with a previous husband who was in the Air Force), and it was a lot worse than this."

"My parents in Oklahoma didn't have indoor plumbing until I was 13, and then the well dried up, and we didn't even have it then."

Canceling B1 'violated spirit of law'

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — By canceling contracts on the B1 bomber and the Minuteman III missile before notifying Congress, the Carter administration violated at least the spirit of the Budget Control and Impoundment Act of 1974, the General Accounting Office said Friday.

The budget act, passed as a result of heated disputes between Congress and the Nixon administration over the administration's refusals to spend appropriated funds, entitles Congress to a joint role in such decisions, Elmer B. Staats, the comptroller general, said.

He said that by canceling the contracts first and then asking Congress to withdraw the appropriations, the administration was offering Congress an accomplished fact and made it excessively difficult and expensive for Congress to reverse the decision.

Harold Brown, secretary of defense, testified on the issue at a closed session of the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee. Participants said Brown defended the decisions, saying they saved millions of dollars. He contended the participants said that the law imposed no specific requirements on when Congress had to be told of decisions.

Brown said his lawyers had advised him that the department's only obligation under the 1974 act was to resume spending the money if Congress did not act in 45 days to approve the cancellations. He said the B1 decision saved $2 million a day and the missile cutoff saved a total of $200 million.

Staats, in a letter to Bert Lance, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, protested that the administration action "can operate to deny to the Congress meaningful review."

On the B1, he said, stop-work orders were issued June 30 and termination orders were sent on July 6, but Congress was formally notified on July 19. On the missile, he said, the decision was announced July 6, termination orders were sent July 11, and Congress was notified July 26. Staats said that it would be "more in keeping with the spirit" of the 1974 law to only suspend work until Congress had approved the rescission of funds.

GOP blasts Demo 'accomplishments'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Republican leader says the best thing the Democratic-controlled House has done is meet on time.

"All I can say is that keeping the trains running on schedule may be the right way to run a railroad, but it's a helluva way to run a Congress," the minority leader, Rep. John J. Rhodes of Arizona, said Friday in reviewing the current session.

Rhodes' assessment differed predictably from one made earlier on the last day of activity before the August recess by the Democratic leader, Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, who called the session the most productive in recent history.

Rhodes said debate on the complex energy bill was "examined into four hectic days just before the recess" and the measure "does nothing to stimulate exploration and development of more oil or gas." He added that "it is more of a tax bill than an energy bill."

"Even though the economy was steadily improving on its own, as Republicans predicted it would, the majority leadership wasted no time jamming through a bloated make-work jobs program," Rhodes said.

He said the spending for jobs would come later, when the economy will be rebounding more, and thus would be inflationary.

"The Democrats, ignoring concerns of small business and projections of job losses for young people and minorities, are stoking up minimum wage legislation," Rhodes said, predicting more inflation and unemployment among the unskilled, along with more welfare expenditures.

The majority, he said, was "preparing to ram through a program that would have driven small farmers to the wall," but Republicans picked up enough Democratic support to set "realistic target prices."

He said a bill loosening political restrictions on federal employees, passed by the House and pending in the Senate, would restore the spoils system.

Rhodes welcomed defeat of a bill that would have eased restrictions on picketing at construction sites and what he described as shunting to the Democrats' baggage room a bill for voter registration on election day.

"Hopefully, the American people will not be fooled by the self-serving whistle-blowing of the Democrat leadership as it toots these 'accomplishments' of Congress," Rhodes said.

U.S. acts to aid businesswomen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter set up a task force Friday to identify business and government practices that discourage women from owning businesses.

"The number and size of women-owned businesses remain remarkably small," Carter said. "According to the 1972 census statistics, the most recent available, the receipts generated by firms owned by women entrepreneurs represented only 0.3 percent of the total for all business firms."

Carter made the statements in a memo to the secretaries of the Treasury, Defense, Labor, Commerce, and Health, Education and Welfare, as well as the General Services and Small Business administrations. He ordered a representative of each with the rank of not less than deputy assistant secretary to comprise the task force and put the Commerce Department representative in charge.

He ordered the task force to:

- Pinpoint business and government practices which discriminate against women or place them at a competitive disadvantage.
- Assess federal programs designed to mitigate these effects.

"This administration wants to encourage women to become business owners, to mitigate conditions and practices that place women at a competitive disadvantage and enhance federal assistance to women entrepreneurs," Carter said.

"However, there is a serious lack of current and accurate information on which to base actions in support of these commitments."

Identity problem

Loophole in alien hiring curb seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's proposal to penalize employers who hire illegal aliens has a potential loophole, a Justice Department official said Friday.

The law, if enacted, would be of no value in cases where illegal aliens managed to obtain false identification, as many of them have, said Terry Adamson, an aide to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell.

Adamson and other administration officials briefed reporters on the fine points of the proposals President Carter made Thursday.

ONE PROPOSAL was for civil fines of up to $1,000 per worker for employers who "knowingly" hire illegal aliens. The catch is in proving whether an employer knew he was hiring an illegal alien.

As the plan now stands, an employer could protect himself by asking an applicant for identification. The Justice Department would prescribe the types of identification that would satisfy the law.

The identification card must be something that everyone, citizen and legal alien alike, could be expected to have. Right now, the administration is talking about a Social Security card.

But the average citizen's Social Security card is a plain paper card without photo or signature, easily forgeable. Thousands of illegal aliens caught each year have them.

The administration plans to begin enforcing existing laws that make it harder to apply for a card and illegal to make or use a phony one. But, Adamson said, counterfeit cards still could be a problem.

The director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Leonel Castillo, said that the government already has a list of employers who have been consistently found with illegals on their payroll. The list was developed as a by-product of INS raids in search of illegals.

"That (the list) will be the first place we'll look," Castillo said.

1,000 black families to be sent to suburbs

CHICAGO (AP) — An agreement to test methods of moving urban black families to the suburbs was announced Friday in a case in which the U.S. Supreme Court told federal officials to find a way to remedy housing segregation here.

The experimental agreement, between the federal officials and plaintiffs in the case, sets up a mechanism that officials hope will move about 1,000 black families to suburban apartments over the next 18 months, said a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

If successful, the program could be a model for breaking color barriers between cities and suburbs across the nation. Under the agreement, HUD will require that suburban developers seeking federal subsidies set aside apartments into which urban blacks can move. The Federal Housing Administration will also give developers who set aside such space preferred treatment in handling mortgage insurance.

The program is voluntary and depends upon the cooperation of developers and housing authorities in the six-county Chicago metropolitan area.

Attorneys have agreed not to seek mandatory court-ordered desegregation at least until next July 1, when the voluntary agreement will be in its last few months of effect.

But the agreement is expected to carry more force than most voluntary programs, because it arises from a 1976 Supreme Court decision.

In that ruling, the court found that HUD has the power to diminish housing segregation in the city by helping urban blacks move to the suburbs. It told HUD to develop some kind of program to accomplish a reduction in segregation.

Alexander Polikoff, attorney for the plaintiffs, said the results of the agreement will be watched by HUD as a possible model for use elsewhere in the nation.

A year-long agreement was reached in the case in June 1976, but that provided money for a smaller program under which 400 urban black families were to move to suburban apartments. However, the program accomplished the moves of only about 150 families.

The case originated in 1968, when Dorothy Gautreaux, a tenant of the Chicago Housing Authority, and others, filed suit against HUD and the housing authority, charging that public housing for blacks in Chicago was confined to black neighborhoods.

The case has effectively stalled construction of any more public housing in black neighborhoods in Chicago. Construction of about 195 units in white neighborhoods is planned, is under way, or has been completed recently, a Chicago Housing Authority spokesman said.

Integrated-school plan postponed

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A court-ordered program to desegregate schools in Wilmington and 10 suburban districts will not go into effect this fall, a federal judge said Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge Murray Schwartz postponed any desegregation plan for the New Castle County school districts until the U.S. Supreme Court rules on the case.

The Wilmington school case is scheduled to come before the high court in October.

Schwartz also rejected the Delaware Board of Education's proposal to desegregate schools by busing only black students out of Wilmington, without busing any students into the city from the predominantly white suburbs.

Schools in Wilmington, Delaware's largest city, are about 83 per cent black. The suburban schools have white-majority enrollments except for De La Warr, which is split half and half. The 11 districts have a total of about 75,000 students.

Schwartz called for the appointment of a new panel to administer the desegregation program, which would draw up a plan to integrate the schools beginning in September 1978.

He ordered the Delaware Board of Education to appoint the five-member panel by Wednesday.

TV, radio exemption on hiring ruled illegal

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal regulation exempting the smallest television and radio stations from reporting on employment of women and minorities was declared illegal by a federal appeals court Friday.

The action concerned a Federal Communications Commission regulation amended last year. It required broadcasters with 10 or more employees to file detailed reports on Equal Employment Opportunity programs.

Previously, broadcasters with five or more full-time employees had been required to comply with the EEO directive. The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found the FCC rule to be "arbitrary and capricious" and said the justifications cited by the FCC were "unsupported or inadequate."

Among those challenging the rule were the National Urban League, the NAACP, the United Church of Christ, the National Council of Churches, the National Organization for Women and the National Black Media Coalition.

The FCC, which declined comment on the decision until it can read the opinion, amended the regulation because of the difficulty of enforcing it after new EEO rules required broadcasters to submit more information.

Brother certain POW was Hiroshima victim

GREENWOOD, Ark. (AP) — The brother of a U.S. pilot killed in World War II says he is convinced his brother died in the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, but can't get the government to say so positively.

Walter Loooper Jr., now 41, was 9 when the family received word in 1945 that his 21-year-old brother, Durden, a lieutenant in the Army Air Force, had been killed in action.

"I idolized him because he was a pilot," Loooper said. "He wanted to come back to the family farm. He loved the farm life."

"Earlier, when he came home after he had won his wings and his commission, he tripped on all of his uniforms and, boy, I thought he was a general."

Durden Loooper was copilot of a B24, the "Lonesome Lady," which was hit by enemy fire while bombing a Japanese battleship anchored at Kure harbor in the vicinity of Hiroshima on July 28, 1945. Ten crewmen bailed out and most were taken prisoner.

The family later received word that Loooper had been killed, and in 1949 his remains and those of four other crew members were buried at Jefferson Barracks near St. Louis. A tombstone erected there lists only the names and gives the date of death as Aug. 6, 1945 — the date the U.S. dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima.

The government has never officially confirmed that Loooper and other prisoners of war believed held at Hiroshima were victims of that bombing, which killed about 100,000 Japanese and signaled the beginning of the nuclear age.

But Loooper's widow, Ruth, of Colorado Springs, Colo., said she was told about six months after the war ended that her husband, "presumably died" in the Hiroshima blast. She has since remarried.

"No one ever in our communications said to me, 'We knew the boys were there' and that sort of thing," she said. "They presumed they were there. Evidently, the research that has gone into it now has revealed they did know they were there, but this was still the primary target, so it had to go."

"I NEVER could feel for certain," she said. "If they could have come right out and told us, it might have been easier to recover from it."

Walter Loooper Jr., who now lives in Kansas City but still visits his parents here, said that to him the St. Louis tombstone is "an admission on the government's part" that the men were killed in the bombing. "Maybe not officially, but an admission."

Loooper said he has been to Washington in an effort to get more information about his brother.

"I didn't get offered any assistance to speak of," he said. "I haven't done any real research on it because I haven't known where to go. I collect newspaper articles, I read books. That's about it. I didn't have the money to do too much."

In Washington, Pentagon spokeswoman Deborah Glazer acknowledged that there were POWs in the Hiroshima area at the time of the bombing. "The bomb was very destructive, obviously, and they have never been able to conclusively say that these people were killed," she said.

"THERE IS one person, a Staff Sgt. Needles who was captured before the bombing, and he did die as a result of injuries in the bombing," said Ms. Glazer. "But we know of no one else that we can say for certain was killed in the bombing."

The Pentagon, at the request of the Associated

Soviet citizens stage 'protest week' over America's new neutron bomb

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet citizens will gather in factories, universities and on collective farms beginning today for a week of protest against America's new neutron bomb.

The official Soviet news agency Tass also reported Friday that antibomb protests were planned in many nations as part of the "International Week of Action Against the Neutron Bomb." It is part of a vigorous propaganda campaign launched recently by the Soviet press.

AS PART OF the campaign, a commentary in the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia called the weapon "inhuman."

Russian Orthodox Patriarch Pimen said in a statement it was "satanic."

President Carter has not yet decided whether to order production of the bomb, but has said he considers the weapon "in this nation's security interests."

The neutron bomb has been the subject of demonstrations in the West, including West Germany where it would be deployed.

Opponents characterize the weapon as one designed to kill people while leaving property undamaged. U.S. officials say the neutron warhead produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear bomb but less than a tenth as much blast power, heat and fallout. Thus, destruction to buildings and other inanimate objects would be far less.

U.S. defense officials want to deploy the neutron warhead on Lance missiles and artillery shells in Europe where North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies are outnumbered by Soviet blue troops and tanks.

"Either their president is a fool, or he's been bought by the arms manufacturers," a Moscow taxi driver said.

ANOTHER taxi driver said, "It puts me in mind of the Cold War days. I think we're justified in calling him a warmonger."

The action week is sponsored by the World Peace Council, a pro-Soviet group based in Helsinki, Finland. It has the support of a companion group, the Moscow-based Soviet Peace Committee, whose chairman called Friday for meetings and rallies to "resolutely say 'no' to the mass-destruction weapon."

For more than a week, Soviet newspapers and television have been jammed with statements criticizing the bomb. Among the groups opposing the new weapons are the Soviet Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, the Soviet union of journalists, the Council of Trade Unions, a parliamentary group and a Soviet youth organization.

Writing to Izvestia, M. Zagorulko of Volgograd called the neutron bomb "the weapon of a people that has lost any understanding of humanity."

Action weeks are a common means of arousing public opinion in support of Soviet policy. There

New bomb hit as 'obscenity'

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Hamilton Amerasinghe, president of the United Nations General Assembly, said today the neutron bomb was "satanic" and an "obscenity."

Amerasinghe, U.N. ambassador from Sri Lanka, spoke at a ceremony in Hiroshima's Peace Park on the 32nd anniversary of the dropping of the first atomic bomb, following a moment of silent prayer by an estimated 50,000 people attending.

"Dazzling in their brilliance, their products are satanic. The most recent obscenity is the neutron bomb, a weapon which will destroy human life but spare human property."

Amerasinghe called on all nations to "explore and implement every means of eliminating the causes of war" as an enduring monument to those killed in Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

President Carter has said that he wants the United States to go ahead with development of the neutron bomb "as one of our options," but that he has not decided whether to produce or deploy it.

U.S. defense officials want to deploy the neutron warhead on Lance missiles and artillery shells in Europe where NATO allies are outnumbered by Soviet blue troops and tanks.

125 cities target of atomic protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new protest coalition announced Friday it is declaring a worldwide campaign against nuclear weapons and atomic power on the anniversary of the World War II atom bombings.

The Mobilization for Survival said in a news conference conducted simultaneously with one in Hiroshima, Japan, that it is sponsoring demonstrations in more than 125 U.S. cities and in Canada.

THE GROUP said black balloons with message tags will be released at nuclear facilities, and candlelight vigils and commemorative church services will be held along with other forms of protest today through Aug. 9. On Aug. 8 and 9 in 1945, the United States dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

David Dellinger, a veteran of pacifist and anti-bomb movements over four decades, said, "It has been the feeling of some of us for a long time that it was necessary to pick up again and take up the anti-nuclear movement."

"This is not an idealist movement," Dellinger said. "It is an issue which affects the life, health, welfare and potential for survival of everybody who lives on this earth."

Panama leader seeks backing for new pact

New York Times Service
BOGOTA, Colombia — Panama's strongman, Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, Friday sought the backing of five liberal Latin American leaders for the new Canal treaty with the U.S. expected to be ready for signature later this month.

At a closed-door meeting with the leaders of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Costa Rica and Jamaica, Torrijos reportedly had circulated copies of the draft agreement and explained the concessions that Panama has made to Washington on controversial military and defense aspects of the new treaty.

The blessings of these five civilian-ruled countries for the accord is considered important in helping reassure nationalists in Panama and leftists throughout Latin America that the Torrijos regime has obtained the best possible treaty from the U.S.

Over the past five years, Venezuela, Mexico, Colombia and Costa Rica have taken the lead in pressing Washington to replace the 1903 agreement that gave the U.S. control over the Canal and the 533-square-mile Canal Zone "in perpetuity."

Jamaica has been less outspoken on the issue, but was believed invited here to represent the English-speaking Caribbean and perhaps indirectly Cuba, with which it has close relations.

Although negotiations are continuing in Washington on economic aspects of the new treaty, there is already agreement that Panama will recover jurisdiction over the Canal Zone within three years and assume full control of the operation of the Canal itself by the year 2000.

In exchange, Panama will permit an American military presence on its territory until the end of the century, albeit in three rather than the present 14 bases and most controversial from a domestic point of view, it will sign a separate protocol with the U.S. allowing Washington to intervene to defend the Canal against any third party after the year 2000.

This protocol guaranteeing the Canal's "neutrality" will be deposited at the Organization of American States and Latin American and Caribbean governments will be invited to subscribe to it.

Diplomatic sources said one of Torrijos's principal objectives at Friday's meeting was to obtain a promise that Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Costa Rica and Jamaica would also back the protocol, thus helping camouflage Washington's new open-ended right to defend the Canal.

New treaty close, says Young

Panama given 'firm U.S. offer'

KINGSTON, Jamaica. (AP) — Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, launched his first Caribbean and Latin American tour in Jamaica on Friday, saying the U.S. "has made a firm offer" to Panama for a new Panama Canal treaty.

"We are pretty close to agreement in talks," he said, but refused to disclose details.

Young said he had encouraged Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley to fly to Bogota, Colombia, Friday to attend a six-nation heads-of-state meeting about the Panama Canal. The U.S. is not attending.

Manley earlier indicated he would not attend, but he flew to Bogota Friday morning. He will return to Kingston to meet Young today.

"I decided it was in the interests of the U.S. to have Mr. Manley participate in this kind of discussion on the canal rather than play a ceremonial role meeting us," Young said.

"I don't know, but I think the fact the Panamanian ambassador (to the U.N.) called me (about the meeting) indicated that the meeting was not called to attack the U.S. position but an attempt to get some understanding and consensus in the Caribbean on the canal issue."

The U.S. and Panama are negotiating a new treaty for the canal to provide for larger U.S. payments to Panama until U.S. control of the waterway ends at the end of the century.

Young discussed several other topics, including human rights and southern African policy, with

Gov. Gen. Florizel Glaspole soon after his arrival here.

Young flies to Mexico City Sunday on the second stop of the 10-nation trip. He is to return to the U.S. Aug. 17.

Young told Glaspole that the current Washington visit of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, soon after President Carter's recent discussions of Africa with British Foreign Secretary David Owen, may have "really turned the corner" on southern African policy.

"Conversations on Namibia and on Rhodesia seem to be going on very well," he added, "despite the arms struggle and the political situation which has kind of disintegrated in Rhodesia."

Glaspole said he was "very glad to see the proper emphasis being put on the Caribbean and Latin America" by the Carter administration.

Young, who is black, thanked Glaspole for Jamaican support of the U.S. human rights campaign and declared: "Political rights and civil rights don't mean anything if you have nothing to eat... if you don't have an opportunity for education or a decent house. So the inclusion of economic needs and human rights is part of the basis of our policy."

Tourist-orientated Jamaica is in serious economic trouble, with a foreign reserve deficit of $100 million, hotel occupancy in June at a record low 16.4 percent and unemployment over 25 percent.

For Young the stop in Jamaica had more elements of a homecoming. Arriving aboard an Alouette jet, he observed that this was his 12th trip, and told a Jamaican well-wisher, "I always feel wonderful coming to Jamaica." He was even more expansive later, saying, "I consider myself a Jamaican."

E. Europe scored on human rights

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The American Helsinki Commission, created last year to monitor developments in East-West relations, strongly criticized the Soviet Union and other East European countries Friday just as 35 members of the Conference on European Security and Cooperation reached agreement on an agenda for plenary meetings in Belgrade this autumn.

The report by the joint congressional Commission on Security and Cooperation singled out human rights as the most critical issue between East and West and declared that the Soviet Union had "shown systematic disregard for civil and political rights" over the 10 months since the commission began its work.

The commission is headed by Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and includes other legislators and executive branch members, although it functions as an independent agency.

Its findings, published in a 254-page report, are far more critical of Soviet compliance with provisions of the final act of the 1975 Helsinki conference than President Carter's own report on East-West relations in the Helsinki context last June.

Since Fascell is a member of the official U.S. delegation to the follow-up European conference at Belgrade, the report automatically raised a question whether the Carter administration is speaking with two voices, State Department officials observed.

Carter and his aides have muted their accusations against alleged violations of human rights in the Soviet Union and among Soviet allies in recent weeks, and the U.S. delegation in Belgrade has persistently sought to reach a compromise on the follow-up conference agenda.

According to the commission, its summary of human rights cases was based on a study of 1,500 cases involving 5,000 persons.

Preparatory meeting for conference ends

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A preparatory meeting for a fall conference on the 1975 Helsinki accords ended Friday.

Representatives of the 35 Western and Eastern nations that signed the Helsinki agreements on European cooperation and security agreed on an agenda and organizational framework for the Oct. 4 conference, intended to assess how well the provisions have been implemented.

The preliminary meeting, which opened June 15, had deadlocked after an East-West controversy developed over the duration of the main conference.

The United States and other Western delegations demanded an open-ended meeting to provide a complete airing of human rights provisions in the Helsinki accords.

The Soviet Union insisted on a cut-off date in an apparent effort to limit such a debate but compromised Wednesday with a more flexible approach that was seen by observers as a major concession.

Albert Sherer, chief of the U.S. delegation, said he was satisfied with the work of the preparatory meeting.

Vatican OKs marriages for men who've had vasectomies

VATICAN CITY (AP). — The Vatican declared Friday that men with vasectomies can enter valid marriages.

The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the most important judge of Roman Catholic orthodoxy, published a decree in which it changes Church practice on the vasectomy issue.

Until now, the Roman Rota, — or supreme court of the Catholic Church — annulled any marriage entered by a man who had been surgically sterilized or was otherwise incapable of ejaculating semen.

The decree, dated May 13, left intact the Catholic teaching that men who are impotent, or incapable of intercourse, may not be validly married.

The document also leaves unchanged the church stand condemning vasectomy as a means of birth control. Vasectomies are sometimes performed for medical reasons and not for purposes of birth control.

The decision on a new attitude toward sterility in marriage is in line with documents of the Second Vatican Council which recognize that procreation, or child-bearing, is not the only purpose of marriage.

Meanwhile, the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, in an editorial signed by Chief Editor Virgilio Levi, criticized noted moral theologian Bernard Haring for questioning the rhythm method of birth control.

Father Haring wrote an article in the specialist journal "Theological Studies" in which he cited reports that the rhythm method — the only birth control method admitted by the Vatican outside total abstinence — may lead to an increased number of spontaneous abortions and malformations. The Redemptorist scholar called on the Church hierarchy to "pay attention to this new knowledge and promote further research."

The editorial cited an article by Jesuit Angelo Serra, director of the institute of human genetics of the faculty of medicine of the Catholic University of Rome, which challenged the fears of Father Haring and called on him to support Church teaching on the matter.

"It seems to Prof. Serra and to us that it is particularly necessary to find in theologians the principal and surest collaborators" (of the teaching authority), the editorial said.

Father Haring had cited research in his article that indicated the use of rhythm, or periodic abstinence from intercourse, could lead to spontaneous abortions because of fertilization by days-old spermatozoa and to malformations in the fetus.

Father Serra, in his article, claims there is no scientific evidence to support such a thesis.

Doctor's 'death pill for aged' stirs moral outrage in Britain

LONDON (AP). — A British doctor has stirred up a national controversy with a prediction that a "death pill" for old people will be available and perhaps obligatory by the end of the century.

"Society's view of life will change from the sentimental to the calculated and sophisticated, and the overriding policy will be survival of the fittest," wrote Dr. John Goundry in this week's edition of the magazine Pulse for British physicians.

GOUNDRY is a general practitioner who says he has "quite a few" elderly patients.

Marion Green, an official of the National Federation of Old Persons' Associations, said: "The sick and infirm need looking after, not killing off. I hope this pill comes to him some day."

David Hobman, director of Help the Aged, said Goundry

"seems totally inconsistent with the Hippocratic oath. He sounds neither humane, nor sensible, nor civilized."

But the 45-year-old physician wrote he finds it sinister that "we now have a science which stops people being born, and the middle-some science of geriatrics which stops us dying. The crime of geriatrics is not its existence or its motives but its failure to realize that death cannot be avoided."

Goundry, from Braintree, near London, said hundreds of British hospitals have been taken over to house the aged sick, and that hotels which once served the rich now house the old.

"The economics are devastating," he wrote, "and the standard of care is rapidly falling."

He claimed the problem of geriatric medicine is vast "and is more dangerous than nuclear war; indeed, perhaps only a nuclear war will resolve it."

Goundry said he believes doctors should be able to give a "death pill" to old people if they ask for it, "but in the end I can see the state taking over and insisting on euthanasia."

Giles Ecclestone, secretary of the Board for Social Responsibility, protested Goundry's stand and said, "Old age is not a disease. This idea is absolutely wrong."

Goundry, a father of three, told an interviewer he expects his article to upset a lot of elderly persons, including some of his own patients, but felt it would be accepted by younger people as naturally as they now accept the birth control pill.

He said he has chosen a place in England's pastoral Lake Country, "and when my own time comes I shall go there to die. When I cannot usefully carry on I shall euthanase myself."

Beyond reality, 'faith in God's will' Prayer buoyed trio adrift 21 days

Associated Press

A shower, a shark, a dolphin, a turtle — these are our realities. Beyond that we have faith in God's divine will."

So wrote Robert Campbell in his diary after he and two companions had drifted in the Pacific for 15 days aboard a 20-foot boat.

Six days later, the 21 days of eating raw fish and drinking blood of birds and turtles ended when a freighter picked up Campbell, Sandra Corea and Joseph Almond. They arrived in Los Angeles this week.

The three planned a reunion of sorts Friday night. Campbell and Miss Corea were to be married at a Van Nuys wedding chapel with Almond as best man.

"I was never a religious person. I grew up a book-educated, New York cynic," Campbell said in an interview. "But when the chips were down, we got down on our knees together, looked up at the enormous universe surrounding us — and we prayed."

On July 9, Campbell, 37, an American who had been living in Nicaragua the past year, left with the others on a weekend outing aboard his boat, Momo Timbuto, to the Bat Islands off Costa Rica.

That afternoon, they caught a 150-pound sailfish. But it grew dark in the battle to take the fish aboard and they failed to notice that the bilge-hatch cover had been knocked off. Water seeped in, covering the engines, and waves washed all the food overboard.

The three caught what seafood they could, mostly turtles and sharks shot with Campbell's revolver.

Once when their water supply was very low, Almond caught two seagulls with his hands. He and Campbell slit the birds' throats to drain out the blood.

Almond, 29, drank first.

"He didn't say a word," said Campbell. "His face told it all. He handed me the cup and I took a swig. I almost gagged. It was revolting. It tasted like rotten fish and crude oil. Sandra wouldn't try it."

Numerous vessels passed them by without seeing or hearing them, before the three were picked up on July 29 by the freighter American Lancer.

RECIFE, Brazil (AP). — Two American missionaries who were arrested and beaten while imprisoned were "victims of natural events," according to an investigating committee's report Friday.

Father Lawrence Rosebaugh, 41, and Mennonite Thomas Capuano, 24, were mistaken for slum dwellers, police said.

Jesus Jews assert own strengths

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP). — Day by day, they worshipped at the temple and preached in the synagogues. They followed Jewish practices. "I am an Israelite," proclaimed the Christian evangelist Paul, "a Hebrew born of Hebrews."

The cross-fire about it rumbled through the ancient Jewish world.

That was the contest of early Christianity, and a modern-day version of that interlocking of faiths also is stirring religious zeal — and conflict — in contemporary America.

"Jews for Jesus," the main organizational manifestation of it, has in the last five years swelled to a claimed 15,000 to 30,000 believers, most of them reared and educated in Judaism.

"Jesus made me more kosher," declare their T-shirts and brochures. They display the Star of David, observe Jewish festivals and strongly assert their Jewishness.

"Because of their belief in Jesus, they feel more Jewish than ever, more loyal to Judaism and more committed to Jewish causes," says the movement's leader, Moishe Rosen of San Rafael, Calif.

"We reject the medieval mentality which insists that Judaism and Christianity are mutually exclusive religions."

But sharp opposition has come from regular Jewish bodies, which consider the messianic Jews as "meshumads," traitors, and also from some Christian groups.

Confusion results from "mixing religious symbols in ways which distort their essential meaning," charged the Long Island Council of Churches, accusing Jews for Jesus of "subterfuge" and "alleged dishonest conversionary tactics."

In reaction, Jews for Jesus filed a lawsuit in New York State Supreme Court in Manhattan, demanding an injunction to halt the Council from disseminating allegedly "false and misleading" criticisms.

"We've been absolutely above board," Rosen says. Some church scholars, both Protestant and Catholic, in recent years have held that Christians should not seek converts from Judaism, since it was the chosen channel of God's revelation, produced the Bible, Jesus, his apostles, and was the "root" stock of Christianity.

"Remember it is not you that support the root, but the root that supports you," Paul wrote in Romans 11. "And so all Israel will be saved."

However, the harshest criticism of the Jews for Jesus has come from Jewish leaders, who see the movement as misusing Jewish symbols as a masquerade for high-pressure Christian evangelism.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

THE POWER WITHIN

On the golf course I hit the ball into the rough and actually I'm glad I did, for while hunting for my ball in the bushes I met a young fellow whose job it was to rake leaves on the course.

While he helped find my ball he said, "I would like to talk to you about myself some time."

"O.K.," I told him, "why not start talking right now while we look for this ball?"

He posed his rake around in a pile of leaves and started off: "I'd like to get somewhere. I'm not satisfied with where I am or what I'm doing or anything about my situation. I want to get somewhere."

"That's fine," I answered. "Where do you want to get?"

"Well," he said, somewhat bewildered, "I don't know. I just never thought about it definitely like that."

"What can you do best?" I asked him.

He hesitated for a moment and then replied, "I really don't know what I can do best."

I guess I was a bit hard on him then because I thought he needed some self-analysis. "Now look," I exclaimed, "You tell me you want to get somewhere and then when I ask you where you want to get, you say you don't know. And you tell me you don't know what you can do best, or even what you would like to do. These points just have to be cleared up before you can expect to get somewhere. When you're able to draw an absolutely clear picture of where you want to go and why you want to get there, then you'll be started on your way."

I had a talk with him some time later and he told me: "I haven't much education or background. I come from a poor family. I just haven't any opportunity."

"What do you mean, poor family and no background?" I asked. "Your folks are decent people; they're not in jail, are they? The people in this community think of them as fine people. Aren't they?"

"They certainly are," he protested.

"Well, then, don't talk your family or your background down. The only real problem you have is that you are a bit short on money, but I've known boys with money who can't stack up to you. You have every opportunity any American ever had. You just have to get organized within yourself."

Conversations like this went on until I had him built up in a proper appreciation of himself. He started becoming a positive thinker. He began to realize that he was somebody. He got some real faith in himself and in his future. The next thing I knew he wasn't raking leaves but working in a factory. Then he became active in organizations in town and in his church. I watched him with great interest. I could see that even his command of the English language improved. The boy really flowered out.

In one of our talks, I told him: "You have a good capacity in that brain of yours. There is something in it."

"But how am I going to get it out and working for me?"

The answer to that is simple: Be positive and self-confident. Then ideas and creative concepts will emerge from a brain at work. He took the advice and has been studying and working and just recently he was made a foreman in his plant. His employer told me that eventually this boy will no doubt become their best supervisor because "He comes up with more creative ideas than any man I have on the job."

The flow of power from within is blocked by many things: hate, impurity, selfishness, pride. By prayer and faith and right living you can remove those blocks and then the power will surge through. This will remake your life.

But how am I going to get it out and working for me?

Turn off TV for 'quality'

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Rev. Donald Wildmon, leader of an upcoming "Turn the Television Off Week," says his organization is not blindly opposed to all televised sex and violence.

"The violence, sex and profanity in 'Roots' were not gratuitous," Wildmon said. He described both "Roots" and "Gone With the Wind" as quality shows and said promoting quality on television is what his protest is all about.

Beginning Sunday, Wildmon's National Federation for Decency, which claims 1,400 members, will sponsor "Turn the Television Off Week."

The minister says he is confident that turning the television off will turn around networks and sponsors involved in prurient programming.

The NFD is asking people to unplug their sets, pray for network programmers and advertisers, and call or write their local stations to protest excessive sex, violence and profanity.

"The strategy of so much network programming is to appeal to the prurient interests of man and not to spend money for quality programming," Wildmon said.

"We feel that what the networks reduce in violence they will more than make up for in sex, especially kinky sex," he said.

According to Wildmon, 54 per cent of prime time shows had what the group considered sexual content, and sex on television occurred outside marriage at a 9-to-1 ratio, which "simply is not real life."

Wildmon resigned his pulpit in Southaven, Miss., in June, and plans to continue his campaign on a full-time basis. A writer of inspirational texts, he feels he can support his family on royalties until the NFD becomes self-supporting.

Donations have come in and are channeled back to churches and civic groups that are also interested in combating what Wildmon calls the "moron quality" of most television programming.

"The networks do not make moral judgments, they make money judgments," he said, stressing that the problem will ultimately be solved by public pressure on advertisers.

Ordination of women priests

Episcopal Church in rift

OAKLAND, Calif. — A widening rift over the ordination of women as priests is one of three controversial issues threatening the centuries-old homogeneity of the 2.8-million member Protestant Episcopal Church.

And if the developing split becomes a schism, the man standing to receive a good deal of the credit — or criticism — for the separation will be a 53-year-old Oakland priest named Robert S. Morse.

Morse is in the vanguard of a movement of clergymen and Episcopal laity seeking to separate from the "Mother Church" over the ordination of women, changes to the church's 428-year-old prayerbook, and the acceptance of homosexuals as full members of the church.

Nearly a dozen California Episcopal churches and missions, including the Rev. Morse's Oakland parish, have severed their ties with local diocesan and national church structure.

Morse, estimated that between 30 to 50 parishes around the country have already broken with the Episcopal Church.

Some Episcopal leaders opposed to the ordination of women priests have cautioned their followers about acting too hastily, advising them to wait until after a fellowship-sponsored convention Sept. 14-16 in St. Louis.

Others have expressed a feeling that the clock can be turned back at the next general convention in 1979.

"Forget those who would give us tranquilizers and put us to sleep by saying, 'We will turn things around at the next convention!'" exclaims the silver-haired rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church whose parishioners overwhelmingly voted to withdraw from the Episcopal Diocese of California last February.

"The Episcopal Church is split!" he maintains, adding "The only question that remains is how big the split is going to be?"

"Episcopalians have a choice now. They can either remain a family-centered, scripturally-oriented, prayerbook people," he declared, "or they can go into the increasingly theological Disneyland whose hierarchy speaks with the moral authority of Mickey Mouse."

Father Morse thinks a "third of the Church" is remaining traditional, "Episcopalian" — a potentially "full well from which to reconstruct the church."

Father Morse was suspended from the performance of all sacramental and priestly functions March 16 by the Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California.

The articulate Rev. Morse, husband, father of two children and a priest in the Diocese of California over 26 years, established two churches for the diocese — St. Elizabeth's in South San Francisco and St. Edmund's in Pacifica.

He initiated the Episcopal college chaplaincies at Stanford University and the University of California at Berkeley and co-founded and built York College Preparatory School in Monterey.

He is executive director of the America Church Union, an umbrella organization for those who have separated from the church and for those who are still members of the church "but are sympathetic and undecided as to their next course of action."

The catalyst, he feels, will be the coming Congress of the Church in St. Louis on Sept. 14, 15 and 16.

"It is a historical moment... a watershed has been reached under the pressures of secularization of our society and in St. Louis we may find the leadership, the organization, for those who want to remain historical churchmen," he said.

Rev. Morse says the ordination of women as priests is a practice that differs so radically from that of other branches of "Catholic Christianity" that it can only lead to a "zeitgeist church — a church that panders to the spirit of the age."

Morse thinks those who promoted the changes at last September's general convention in Minneapolis are seeking to take the Episcopal Church into a single merging Protestant church "where you can believe anything you want."

"There's nothing new about homosexuality," he said. "It's like adultery. It's always been going on."

But it is the church's responsibility to seek the greater good and the greater good is the family.

Morse says there were important theological changes to the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer made in Minneapolis. It was written in 1549 by Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury.

The new prayer book offers both new and old versions of prayers — a fact that some feel will shatter Episcopal solidarity. Its importance can be recognized when it is noted that the Episcopal Church has no other written dogma.

The theological "problems" he says include the ordination rites, baptism rites, but the change of major significance was in the wording permitting a female to become a priest.

But the lesson of history, and now of the history of a scientific culture — and also the message of the Gospel — is that it is the very creativity of man that can spell his doom, that his knowledge can be turned into blindness, and his power into self-destruction, Gilkey says.

A Baptist professor of theology, Gilkey, 58, is author of numerous trenchant books, including "Religion and the Scientific Future" (Harper & Row), and "Reaping the Whirlwind" (Seabury Press).

His views on scientific predominance and its need for qualifications were first presented at a science and religion conference at Gustavus Adolphus College, and are included in a new volume, "The Future of Science."

Just as theology once was considered the reigning criteria and source of "true" knowledge, with all other disciplines seeking to incorporate its reasoning, he says, science and technology now hold that encompassing sway.

Science, "has determined education, molded our sense of human excellence, grounded our hopes for the future and established itself as the queen of all other disciplines of learning," he says.

Its objective techniques have become "the method of inquiry by which all other methods of knowing have had to remake themselves and conform, or be excluded from academic standing or serious consideration."

"Science alone, therefore, defined what was real..."

But if it is to avoid the downfall that for years undercut religion, the modern "queen science" is going to have to reassess some of its assumptions, Gilkey says, including these:

—That scientific discoveries are detached from their cultural context, although they actually are relative to it and to the accumulated store of human insights, and need to be supplemented and corrected by them.

—That scientific inquiry is the sole method by which men and women discover what is real — a view that strips nature of value and persons of their selfhood, depth and freedom.

—That scientific knowledge cannot be distorted, or cause problems which can't be resolved by more science — an assumption now plainly erroneous.

"We now know that technology raises political, social, legal and moral problems on every front," Gilkey says. "Consequently, the proliferation and expansion of our technological capacities must be guided by legal, social and ethical wisdom if self-destruction... are not to result."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sgt. Jim Higgins, a 29-year veteran of the San Francisco Police Department, expresses despair at the "macho" image of insensitive, hard-drinking, boisterous policemen.

The burly sergeant is deeply involved in a small but growing group of law enforcement agents who have formed the Fellowship of Christian Peace Officers. Twenty-five officers belong to the San Francisco chapter with other units in Oakland, Los Angeles and other cities.

Sgt. Art Brandwood, president of the fellowship's 10-member Oakland chapter, said trying to spread the Gospel among policemen is a difficult challenge.

'Know it all'

I have read your articles for several years and while I usually agree with your basic premises I have noted a certain "know it all" tone in your writings. A good illustration is found in your "Let's Watch Our Language" comments on Evangelist Ronald L. Carlson, in the L.P.T. for July 9.

Many trails

In reading over some of the letters of today's Religion' Section, I was reminded of a time when I was a teenager beginning to find out there were other religions besides Christianity. I asked at that time, why if there was only one God, why were so many religions or sects of religions? Her reply was "There's one great mountain with many trails and God sits at the top."

Counterfeits

It isn't often that I write letters to the Editor, but I do want to make an exception today. I have been reading your Religion Page from time to time, and have enjoyed it — for the most part. Of course, no one fully agrees with another's position — and so I have accepted most of your writings in that spirit of understanding — and feel good that there is such a page to read in our local newspaper.

Origins

Have you ever studied the difference of the religions of Mormons, Christian Science, or Jehovah's Witnesses? When and by whom they were started? I believe after you do you will feel different than you do now. Read Galatians 1: 6, 7, 8.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

GRATITUDE OPENS THE DOOR TO HEALING

Because gratitude to God for the good you can already see is the beginning of total trust in His goodness. Trust that opens your thinking to all His care for you... including healing.

A cartoon illustration by Snyder. In the foreground, a chef wearing a tall white hat and glasses is cooking on a charcoal grill. A bag of charcoal labeled "CHAR KOL" is on the ground next to him. To the right of the grill is a vacuum cleaner with "VAC" written on its side. In the background, a group of people are sitting under a large umbrella on a patio. The cartoon is signed "Snyder" and dated "8/80" in the bottom right corner. In the bottom left corner, there is a small logo and the text "© 1980 by S. S. Snyder, Inc.".

Part 5 - class 8 Outward

Forecast for Sunday
YOUR BIRTHDAY
TODAY: This year you must step up with more energy, exert willpower just to mark time until the break you are creating is a little further along. Where you have a tolerable situation let well enough alone; next year will bring opportunities to use every nuance of skill learned in experience. Relationships are in the need of some acceptance-response. Today's natives are easily stirred and as readily calmed, want only the truth, a chance to see for themselves.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Attend usual amenities, then get off the scene. Do the least by rushing out to make expenses, provides very little pleasure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): In dealing with local issues, ask advice of someone far

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Energy, inspiration, a renewed, but not much needed, but not much taking trips if away from Organize good prospect constructive change.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Leave serious business, near promotions aside

Phils rip Dodgers; gain lead

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies, after a long and arduous climb, reside atop the National League East standings this morning and they can thank some reluctance on the part of the Dodgers' braintrust Friday night for helping them get there.

The Phillies unloaded on the Dodgers for a resounding seven-run eighth-inning, touched off by a thundering home run by Greg (The Bull) Luzinski, and they came away with an 8-3 triumph and a half-game edge on the Chicago Cubs who once led them by 8½ games.

"I can't be over-enthusiastic just yet," said a smiling Danny Ozark who celebrated his 400th victory as the Phillies' manager. "But I've said all along this will be a four-team race—the Cubs, Pirates, Cardinals and us—and it looks like I'm something of a prophet. I just hope it's not this close the rest of the way."

Friday night's game was close—for awhile.

After the Dodgers broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the top of the eighth inning, the Phillies stormed back.

After Mike Schmidt opened the Phillies' eighth with a single, the ninth hit off starter Rick Rhoden on a steamy night at Veterans Stadium; Luzinski followed with a towering home run that struck the leftfield foul pole.

It also tied the score, 3-3.

It was the first hit of the month for Luzinski. He drove home 32 runs during the month of July but was 0-for-August, hitless in 14 at-bats since homering on Sunday, July 31.

The 47,574 fans cheered long enough that Luzinski had to take a bow to silence them.

Now, manager Tommy Lasorda decided to remove the fatigued Rhoden and he brought in young Lance Rautzhan.

Rautzhan faced four batters, retiring only one, on a misfired bunt attempt. The third of the three hits he yielded, to Ted Sizemore, produced the tie-breaking run and launched the Phillies on their way to the biggest inning of the year by a Dodger opponent.

Sizemore admitted after the game he was slightly surprised to see that Rautzhan, a lefthander, was permitted to pitch to him.

"I was shocked," is the way he put it.

Seven runs and eight hits later the Phillies were rolling, right into first place in the N.L. East, while the loss hardly staggered the Dodgers' lead in the West. Even with their third loss in their last four starts, they still managed to gain a half-game on Cincinnati which lost a doubleheader to Pittsburgh and now lead by 1½.

So, was Friday night's a pre-

Tanana casts his own spell; Angels win 5-0

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

Forget all that stuff about hypnotist, and witches, and good luck charms, and four-leaf clovers and what have you.

Angel manager Dave Garcia knows what his team needs to take care of all its problems and the Angels got a good dose of medicine Friday night.

"I don't believe in all that stuff but I do believe in my ballplayers," Garcia said. "I believe that it takes hitting and pitching to win games."

The Angels got both Friday night. Frank Tanana did the pitching, three-hitting the Baltimore Orioles en route to a 5-0 win, his first

Angel of the day

FRANK TANANA pitched a three-hit shutout for his first victory since July 3 in 5-0 win.

victory since July 3 and 13th of the year.

The hitting came from a variety of sources, including Bobby Bonds who belted his 24th home run of the season with Gil Flores aboard in the third inning.

Seven different Angels contributed to the 10-hit attack, with Flores getting three and Dave Chalk two as Tanana raised his American League leading shutout total to seven and lowered his earned run average to 2.06.

It was the third Angel win in four nights, left them with a 50-54 record and pulled them within 12½ games of AL West leading Chicago, a 12-2 victim of Kansas City.

All the scoring came in the first three innings, long before Luis Huebner, the official witch of Los Angeles County, went to work at 9 p.m., to erase the evil spell cast over the Angels back when they were formed in 1961.

"It is hard for me to believe in that stuff," said Garcia, whose team met with hypnotist Arthur Ellen four weeks ago. "She (the witch) was a little late to begin with and I'd rather believe Frank Tanana pitched an excellent game and the team hit well."

Whatever the reason, Tanana did pitch an exceptional game in raising his record to 13-7 and leaving him second only to teammate Nolan Ryan (15-10) in the American League victory race.

Plagued by a stiffness of the elbow since July 11, the day Garcia became manager, Tanana walked only two batters and permitted only two runners as far as second base.

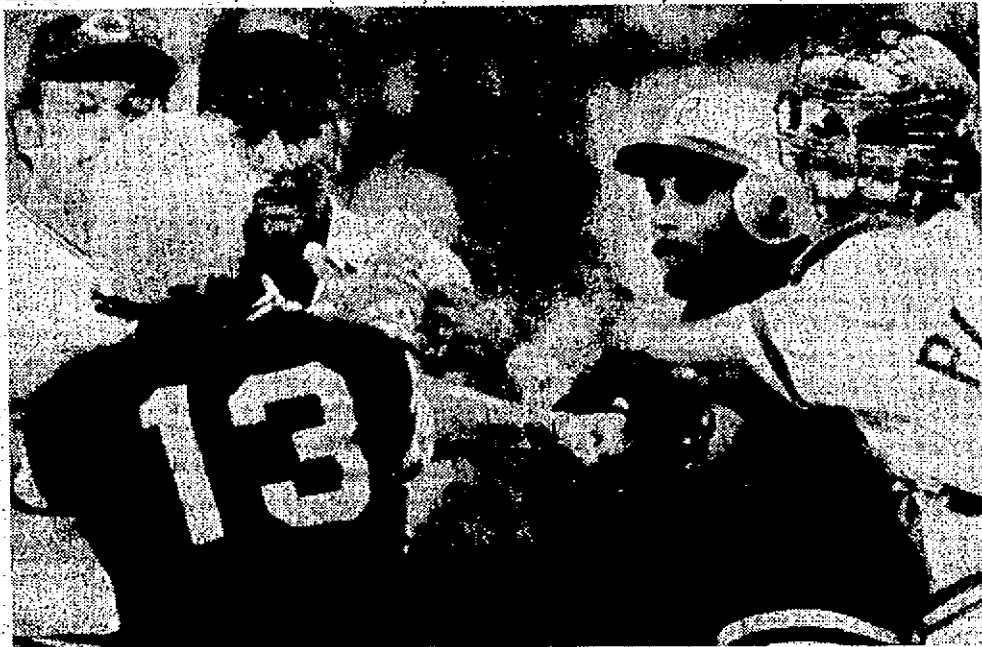

After opening the game with a walk, Elliott Maddox got to third with one out on a Ken Singleton singled. But Tanana, who had only one win in eight previous starts, got out of that jam by striking out Lee May and getting Eddie Murray to pop out.

In the third inning, Maddox singled with one out and went to second when Rick Dauer was hit by a pitch. He was stranded there, however, as Singleton struck out and May forced Dauer at second.

"I guess you can't complain about much when you win 5-0," said Tanana, after raising his lifetime record against the Orioles to 9-2 and lowering his earned run average against them to 1.59. "I was really happy with my changeup. The fact I got that over and they went after breaking balls, which were down, really saved me."

After the game, Tanana immediately soaked the tender left arm and admitted he was still having a few problems with it.

Pirates brawl past Reds for doubleheader victory

Combined News Services

Dave Parker hit two home runs and Frank Taveras had an inside-the-park grand slam to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a doubleheader sweep of the Cincinnati Reds, 12-1 and 10-6, Friday night.

The twin victories moved Pittsburgh to within one game of the first-place Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East race. Cincinnati fell to 1½ games behind the Dodgers in the NL West.

Parker got on base nine consecutive times after striking out his first time up in the twinbill. Besides his home runs, he had two doubles and knocked in five runs.

Cincinnati's George Foster slammed two home runs in the nightcap, a solo shot in the third inning and a two-run blast in the fifth, tying the score at 6-6. Johnny Bench also homered in the fourth.

Foster leads the majors with 109 RBI and 38 home runs.

The doubleheader was marred by a first-game fight and the second game started under an umpire's warning to both teams. The opener had ended with a free-for-all after Cincinnati pitchers hit two Pittsburgh batters and threw several pitches close to Pirate hitters.

Taveras, center of the first-game brawl, retaliated in the second inning of the second game with his first home run of the season, which came with the bases full. Bill Robinson, who was taken out of the first game when he was beamed by Reds hurler Fred Norman, hit a three-run home run in the sixth inning of the nightcap to put the Pirates in front 10-6.

Parker, who had not hit a home run since July 9 hit two in the first game, batting in five runs in high-lighting a six-run second inning. The Pirates scored four more runs in the third inning, two of them on Parker's second homer, his 16th.

The brawl started with two out in the ninth when Taveras, who had been brushed back from the plate twice by Dale Murray, was brushed back again by Joe Hoerner.

Jaworski paces Eagles, 21-3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles, who lost all six exhibitions a year ago, rode short touchdown runs by Tom Sullivan, Herb Lusk and Cleveland Franklin to a 21-3 victory over the New York Jets Friday night in a National Football League preseason game.

Ron Jaworski's 38-yard pass to Harold Carmichael put the Eagles in position for Sullivan's decisive three-yard scoring dive with 2:52 to go in the first period, wiping out New York's 3-0 lead.

Lusk, the former Long Beach State running back, scored from the one at 5:50 of the third period after John Walton completed passes of 22 yards to Charles Smith and 20 to Vince Papale. Franklin went in from one yard out to cap the scoring with 4:55 to play.

The Jets, who lost their exhibition opener 20-6 to Chicago in last Saturday's Hall of Fame game, again failed to score a touchdown. They managed only a 19-yard field goal by Dom Antonini 4:12 into the first period. It came six plays after New York quarterback Richard Todd opened the game with a 57-yard pass to Richard Caster, which brought the ball to the Philadelphia 17.

Great QB race begins

When Rams host Vikings tonight

By Rich Roberts
Staff Writer

Sixty thousand Ram fans are expected to be waiting with baited boos this evening for Act One, Book Two, of the ongoing quarterback saga.

Pat Haden, an onlooker behind James Harris and Ron Jaworski a summer ago, hopes to tame the Minnesota Vikings, who are just emerging from the hibernation they entered in January's 32-14 loss to Oakland in Super Bowl XI.

Kickoff at the Coliseum is scheduled for 7 p.m.

This will be the first of six practice games, the primary purpose of which is to determine personnel decisions, including whether Joe Namath, 34, can be more effective with a strong supporting cast than he was the last couple of seasons with the Jets.

Haden will play the first half, to be followed by Namath in the third quarter and rookie Vince Ferragamo in the fourth. Any comparisons must be tempered by the fact that neither side will be employing its stalwarts for longer than the first 30 minutes.

Namath will get his chance with the Rams' regular offensive unit—such as it is, with four holdouts—against the Philadelphia Eagles next week.

Another issue to be settled is whether the Rams' quarterbacks will be allowed to call their own plays in the huddle this season.

Since Haden is a Rhodes scholar, coach Chuck Knox will entrust him with the responsibility tonight. However, Namath may not be able to handle it, being of less intellect and having played only 12 years in the NFL.

At any rate, it's only an experiment, as are many summer tactics.

The offense will be functioning without holdouts Harold Jackson, Charles Young, Tom Mack and Rich Saul, plus Lawrence McCutcheon, who has rushed for 4,285 yards in four years but won't gain an inch tonight.

McCutcheon will be kept out because of a pulled hamstring.

The defense will be without middle linebacker Jack Reynolds, who broods over contract offers in Tennessee.

Broncos rally to beat Colts

DENVER (AP) — Craig Morton and Craig Penrose each threw second-half touchdown passes, rallying the Denver Broncos to a 14-8 victory over the Baltimore Colts Friday night in the opening National Football League pre-season game for both teams.

The Broncos trailed 6-0 before Morton connected with fullback Lonnie Perrin on a 51-yard scoring play early in the third period. Perrin had slipped through the Colt defense and was wide open, catching the ball at the Baltimore 23-yard line and struggling to keep his footing before diving into the end zone.

Baltimore went ahead 8-7 when Morton was tackled in the end zone by Ron Fernandez for a safety. But Penrose, who played about half the game, then hit wide receiver Rick Upchurch on a 15-yarder with 11:27 remaining in the final period for the other Denver touchdown. Hard running by rookie Rob Lyle helped set up that score.

Solomon KOs top-seed Connors

NORTH CONWAY, N.H.—Gutsy Harold Solomon, the No. 5 seed, powered his way to an upset over top-seeded Jimmy Connors, 1-6, 6-4, 6-1, in a quarter-final match in a $125,000 international tennis tournament.

Connors was outslugged and outplayed by the powerful Solomon in a match that was interrupted by a rainstorm with Connors up one set. When the match resumed, Connors began missing easy shots, hitting the ball into the net on numerous occasions. In the second set, Solomon broke Connors serve in the first and fifth game. Connors' game fell apart in the third set as Solomon pulled off the upset. Connors who admitted he was angered, snapped, "I can't win every time I go out on the court. This tournament was a stepping stone because I haven't played much in the last three weeks. Now I can get ready for my next match," Connors said.

Solomon, who hasn't beaten Connors since he was 19, said he changed his strategy after the disastrous first set. "I was trying to hit angle shots but he hits those balls so well I felt like a spectator. So I changed my strategy and hit the ball up the middle. Jimmy has a low margin of error on his ground strokes and he gets angry when he starts hitting them out. So I just kept hitting them down the middle and it worked."

Solomon faces John Alexander, a 7-6, 7-6, winner over Steve Kravitz, in the semifinals. In another upset, Eddie Dibbs beat second-seeded Brian Gottfried, 5-7, 6-4, 7-6.

Two eagles give Rankin edge

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP)—Judy Rankin came charging home with two eagles on the Sunningdale Golf Course Friday to take a one-stroke lead over South Africa's Sally Little in a nip-and-tuck battle for the European Women's Open golf title.

With three rounds completed and 18 holes to go, Rankin of Midland, Tex., had a total of 211—11 strokes under par. Little was at 212 and Sandra Post, Boynton Beach, Fla., at 214. The women are playing for a first prize of $15,000.

Fortunes swayed back and forth all day as the weather changed once more. The tournament began in hot sunshine Wednesday, came through swirling wind Thursday and occasional rain Friday.

Rankin's two eagles, which earned her the lead, came on the 12th and 16th, both par-5 holes. But she was the first to admit the pars had been made rather easy for this tournament.

At the 420-yard 12th,

Rankin used a 3-iron to get within five feet of the pin and knocked in the putt. At the 400-yard 16th, she hit a 4-wood from the center of the fairway to 16 feet from the hole and the putt went in.

Rankin completed a round of 71, three under par.

"Of course I should have taken a penalty and gone back to the tee," Little said. "But I thought I could get out so I took the penalty and dropped the ball. It was a ghastly mistake."

She hit the ball against a tree trunk and it bounced back at her. Her next attempt got tangled up in the branches and fell into deep rough. Then she had to hack out onto the fairway. She took eight strokes on the par-4 hole, and was suddenly eight under par for the tournament instead of 12 under.

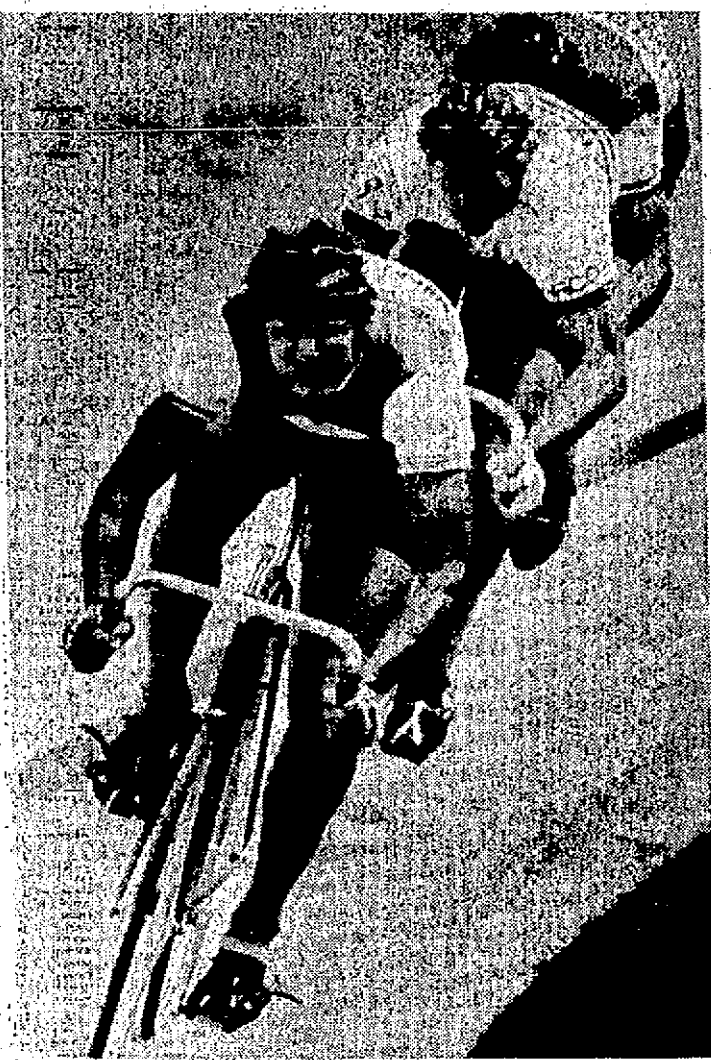

Meanwhile, blonde Sandra Post shot the best round of the day, a six-under-par 68 and crept up to three strokes behind the lead.

Birdie in dark gives Regalado 63 and lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP)—Mexican Victor Regalado, the last man on the golf course, birdied the final hole in near darkness to card a second-round 63 and grab the lead at the halfway point Friday in the weather-delayed $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open.

Regalado rolled in a 12-15 foot birdie putt on the 18th hole that finished off his eight-under-par effort over the storm-lashed and darkness-shrouded, 6,598-yard Wethersfield CC course.

It gave the Tijuana native, winner of one title in his five years on the American tour, a 36-hole total of 130, 12 under par.

He held a one-stroke advantage over first-round pacesetter Lee Elder and rookie Curtis Strange, who posted their 131 totals moments before a violent thunderstorm hit central Connecticut in mid-afternoon and caused a 14-hour suspension of play.

That, combined with the two-hour delay in getting started because of morning fog, set the schedule back so that Victor had to play his last two holes in the gathering gloom of early evening.

"I couldn't even see the cup," he said of the birdie that put him in the lead. "I wanted to finish very badly."

"Clyde (tour official Clyde Mangum) came to us on the 18th tee and asked if we wanted to finish. I said 'let's go.' I didn't care if I made bogey or what. I just wanted to finish so I could sleep late in the morning and not have to come back out here and finish up."

He finished up with the best score he's ever had in this country.

Lee Trevino, a winner in the Canadian Open in his last previous start, was only two shots out of the lead after the first round but could do no better than match par 71 and was well back at 137.

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP)—South African golfer Thieme Britz, who carded a course-record 66 on the opening round, fired a 67 Friday for a halfway score of 133 to lead the German Open.

Bob Bynam of Raleigh, N.C., matched Britz's course record score on Friday for a two-day total of 136 in the international match.

Next came John Hammond of Britain at 138, followed by Antonio Garrido of Spain 139 and American Mitch Adcock and Britain's Peter Townsend 140.

Junior Nicklaus Amateur entrant

SAN JOSE (AP)—Entries for the U.S. Amateur golf championship qualifying play at Alhambra Country Club on Aug. 15 include Jack Nicklaus Jr.

The oldest son of golf's premier player will play the 36-hole qualifying round after watching his father play in the PGA Championship at nearby Pebble Beach. The PGA event ends Aug. 14.

Heavyweight Ray Sui, last year's grand champion, is favored to repeat that accomplishment this year. However, he must wade through preliminary rounds just like his challengers, and if he is defeated the crown could go to any of a number of athletes.

"There are so many factors and so many competitors that it is nearly impossible to predict who might end up as grand champion," said Parker, who nonetheless mentioned Rader Smith of Louisiana as a possible successor to Sui.

"He barely missed last year," Parker reported.

In addition to competition in various women's and age group categories, champions will be determined in four weight classifications—lightweight, middleweight, light-heavyweight and heavyweight.

BEATNFL down on

Edited by Jack Schrader

The team physician for the Minnesota Vikings says the use of pep pills in the National Football League has declined in recent years.

"Nobody has ever been able to show that amphetamines help," said Dr. Donald Lannin. "It was the same as the drunk singing in the shower. He only thinks he sings better."

Lannin, addressing a sports injury seminar at the Vikings' training headquarters in Mankato this week, said the use of pep pills is "100 per cent frowned on" in the NFL.

Cotton wants winner

Cotton Fitzsimmons, signed Friday to coach the Buffalo Braves, said he believes he can make a playoff contender soon out of the team that fell on its face last season.

"I feel we will be able to put the Braves back where they were battling for the playoffs and championship a couple of years ago," said the former coach of the Atlanta Hawks and Phoenix Suns.

"I'd like an exciting team," Fitzsimmons said. "The people want a winning team. I want a running team—one that moves the ball up and down the floor."

"We'll need a solid defense and a disciplined team in the fundamentals. I certainly feel we need a team that works together."

The great escape

Outfielder Reggie Jackson has an escape route in his contract with the New York Yankees that allows him to leave the club at the end of the season, the New York Post reported Friday.

Jackson, whose $2.9 million, five-year contract was the most expensive signed by a free agent last winter, has been the center of controversy all year and apparently intends to use his option to leave the club.

Jackson refused to confirm or deny the report. The outfielder said his contract "has many different features," and said that revealing any portion of it would be "an infringement on my business privacy."

Yankee president Gabe Paul said, "I don't know anything about any such clause in Reggie's contract."

Hunter plea rejected

A county judge denied Notre Dame halfback Al Hunter's request for a restraining order that would permit him to begin practice with the team, Aug. 15.

St. Joseph County Superior Court Judge William A. Hosinski said the papers submitted by Hunter's attorney do not show "immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage" will result if the restraining order is not issued immediately.

The judge gave attorney Robert L. Stephan until 10 a.m. Monday to set a date for a hearing at which the university may be represented.

Defense...defense!

Leo Boivin was hired as head coach of the St. Louis

Blues Friday and immediately put in his case for the defense.

"We've really got to work on defense and we've got to do everything possible to make a good, sound hockey club," Boivin said. "You're going to win them in your own end."

General manager Emile Francis concurred. "The better defense you play, the more goals score," Francis noted.

"I want to have a good aggressive team," Boivin declared, "and of course, I want to have a winning team."

BRIEFLY — Basketball star Pete Maravich of the New Orleans Jazz has agreed to the salary section of a five-year contract paying more than $700,000 a year. The contract could make Maravich the highest paid player in professional sports. A Jazz spokesman said he hopes the other points of the contract can be worked out Monday when Maravich and his agents meet Lewis Schaffel, general manager of the Jazz. The sister-in-law of professional heavyweight boxer Duane Bobick was reported in critical condition Friday with a gunshot wound in the neck. Police said they were called to the Little Falls, Minn., home of Leroy Bobick to investigate a gunshot injury, and found Kathy Bobick injured. Police said no arrests have been made and they are continuing an investigation. The United States lost its provisional first place in the annual international Admiral's Cup sailing series when a jury upheld a West German protest against an American boat. The protest cost the American boat, Bay Sea, a 14th position and 41 points in the race and moved the British team into the provisional point lead with one event remaining. The U.S. Olympic Site Selection Committee is planning to visit Los Angeles, New Orleans and New York before September 15 to inspect potential Olympic Games venues for 1984. The three cities are the only ones which fulfilled the requirement of the USOC by completing questionnaires by July 31. Also, the Site Selection Committee will visit Baton Rouge and Mission Viejo, two cities bidding to become permanent national training centers of the USOC. Australia, with Neri Bay, was at the helm, defeated Great Britain in the third consecutive victory in elimination trials for the America's Cup Friday at Newport, R.I.

Falcons learn five P's plan
under BennettBy Ed Shearer
Associated Press

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Leeman Bennett, the youngest head coach in the National Football League, has a simple philosophy—one he calls the five P's.

"Prior Planning Prevents Poor Performance," he proclaims.

It's a philosophy that has caught on with the Atlanta Falcons, who insist the 33-year-old Bennett has brought a sense of direction, leadership and organization to the team's 13th pre-season camp.

"Things are a lot different now," says running back Haskel Stanback. "It's much more organized. We go out there and know what we'll be doing."

"When you know what you'll be doing in practice, you can prepare a little bit more," says quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

After spending seven years as an assistant in the NFL, the last four as receiver coach for the Rams, Bennett decided to accept the challenge of overhauling the Falcons' faltering football fortunes following consecutive 4-10 seasons.

"I am best described as a 'people coach,'" said

Bennett, who played at the University of Kentucky. "I believe in knowing our people and going from there. People play the game, not X's and O's."

"The teams that win consistently do the little things, and do them well."

That's why he is slowly developing an offense—one play at a time. He says that devoting one practice session to one play allows every candidate for a job to see how a defense will react in any situation.

It also gives his players an equal opportunity. "I just want all the players here to feel like they had a shot at making our team."

He will do that in the pre-season games, setting out the period of time or number of plays that each player will perform during the first three exhibitions.

He will use the last three games before the regular season opener with the Rams on Sept. 18 to determine his starting lineup.

"The only reason we (the coaches) are here is to help these guys be as good football players as they can be."

"Everyone has a way to do it, but I can't copy someone. I've got to do it my way," he added. "If it doesn't work, I'll have to change."

Cuevas guards
welter crown

The World Boxing Association welterweight title bout tonight will be a classic match of the youngster against the ring-hardened veteran, but with a twist. Jose Pipino Cuevas, 19, is the champion, and Clyde Gray, 30, the hopeful challenger.

Cuevas became the division's youngest champion ever when he knocked out Angel Espada last year in Mexico. The 5-foot-8½, 148-pound youngster from Mexico City has since made two defenses of his title, whipping Shoji Tsunimoto and Miguel Campa-

Gray, a 10-year veteran, brings a 56-5-1 mark into the fight, and has stopped 40 of his foes. Cuevas lost his only previous fight in Los Angeles, a split decision to Andy Price in June of 1976. But the then 18-year-old slugger bounced back to take the title away from Espada.

His record is 25-3, with 18 knockouts. The Cuevas-Gray

Dorsett debuts for Cowboys
Giants search for QB

Combined News Services

The New York Giants start their search for a first-string quarterback today when they host the New England Patriots in the opening pre-season game for both National Football League teams.

The Giants traded regular Craig Morton to Denver during the off-season and veteran Norm Snead retired, setting up an intramural tug of war for the No. 1 passing job.

John McVay, starting his first full season as Giants' head coach, has a host of candidates from which to pick and he'll use the exhibition season to decide on the quarterback derby winner.

Steve Ramsey, acquired from the Broncos for Morton, second-year man Jerry Golsteyn, veteran Dennis Shaw, and rookies Randy Dean of Northwestern and Joe Pisarcik, who played at New Mexico State and in the Canadian League, are all possibilities.

Ramsey was the only one of the group who saw action in the NFL last season, passing for 1,931 yards and 11 touchdowns at Denver.

Fullback Larry Csonka, coming back after knee surgery, is not expected to play in today's game. The Giants prefer to bring Csonka and lineman Tom Mullen, another knee case, along slowly.

The Patriots, who came within an eyelash of knocking off Super Bowl champion Oakland in the playoffs a year ago, have a much more stable offensive picture than do the Giants.

New England's quarterback is Steve Grogan, who finished behind Ramsey statistically last season but led the Patriots to an 11-3 season. The Pats' ground game is anchored by power back Sam Cunningham, who rushed for 824 yards last season.

The Giant gem is defensive tackle Gary Jeter of Southern California, who is trying to crack a veteran

Mustangs travel to Sacramento

The Long Beach Mustangs, coming off a 44-5 win over the L.A. Norsemen, travel to Sacramento tonight to face the Buffalos at Marshall Field.

Free physicals

Free physicals for Mustang, Colt and Long Beach Poly Pop Warner football players will be held Monday morning at 8 in the Poly High nurse's office. For further information call John Rambo (433-8156).

Sacramento should provide a stiff test for the Mustang defense which has surrendered just 18 points in three wins. The Buffalos put 27 points on the board against San Gabriel last week, the team which handed the Mustangs their only loss of the season.

front four. New England likes the looks of its two first-round draft picks, wide receiver Stanley Morgan and cornerback Raymond Clayborn. Morgan is battling veterans Randy Vataha and Marlin Briscoe for a job with Darryl Stingley at the other flanker slot.

Three former Heisman Trophy winners will touch the ball when Dallas meets San Diego at Texas Stadium.

Some 55,000 Dallas fans were scheduled to watch the debut of Tony Dorsett, who became collegiate football's all-time ground-gainer in a star-spangled career at Pittsburgh.

However, Dorsett has yet to break through in the Cowboy training camp at Thousand Oaks because of a knee bruise. He is not expected to be hampered by bruise and is scheduled for second-half duty in the game.

The other former Heisman winners who will see action are Johnny Rodgers of the Chargers and the oldest of the Cowboys, quarterback Roger Staubach.

Also to play is Joe Washington, San Diego's No. 1 draft choice a year ago, who missed the 1976 season with a knee injury. He's a running back who former Texas Coach Darrell Royal once described "as so agile he could jump through a key hole." Washington was a Heisman runnerup.

When Buffalo tests Pittsburgh, the teams will be without some of their outstanding talent.

Most notable in his absence will be Bills' running back O.J. Simpson, who's been having occasional blurred vision in his left eye.

Simpson will undergo tests at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore Monday, but he doesn't appear to be overly concerned.

"The last time I really had to miss a few pre-season games, I ended up gaining 2,000 yards," he said, referring to the 1973 season when he was sidelined by an injured ankle.

Steeler coach Chuck Noll will be without the services of two All-Pro holdouts — middle linebacker Jack Lambert and cornerback Mel Blount.

Lambert wants a better contract, while Blount simply wants out.

In other contests, Atlanta tackles St. Louis, New Orleans travels to Chicago, Detroit hosts Kansas City, Green Bay entertains Cincinnati and Miami tests Tampa Bay.

Shakespeare's 'Timon' updated

By G. Benton Laine
Staff Writer

Purists usually say that what Shakespeare hath joined together, no one should rend asunder—or rend in any unorthodox manner, either.

Those purists will not like the 28th San Diego National Shakespeare Festival's mounting of Timon of Athens, a seldom-seen tragedy making its first appearance at the Old Globe Theater this summer.

A pox on the purists. Costumed and set in the 19th century, the Globe presentation still adheres rather fully to the words of Shakespeare. More importantly, the Globe company has managed to lighten considerably a work that many Shakespearean scholars regard as the most pessimistic of all his works in terms of the way he regards humankind.

That's a tribute to the pacing and insight brought to Timon by director Eric Christmas. Timon is no less charitable in his assessment of his fellows, his cynicism no less blunt.

Timon, even in the Globe's reading, is not comedy. There is no mistaking the love-mistake that the former nobleman vents on erstwhile companions. But it is now possible to laugh at the schemes of those who would continue to seize on his once charitable nature. The antics of the senators seem almost Watergateish in their venality. In all, it is a resourceful working of a drama that might otherwise be too morbid for most audiences.

In the reviewed version, Richard Kneeland gave a splendid reading of the title role. His character underwent wildly perceptible changes as he essayed both the benevolence of pre-bankruptcy and the meanness of self-imposed exile. The comeuppance banquet which ends Act I is one of the most thoroughly imposing scenes the Globe has done in recent years, providing both the ending for Act I and the catalyst for Act II.

Review

John McMurry, as Timon's steward, is also particularly effective, as is Ronnie Baker as Apemantus. In the reviewed work, Douglas Sheehan portrayed Alcibiades, the exiled army captain (complete with World War I vintage uniform, boots and medals) who vows vengeance on Athens. He didn't speak with the authority normally associated with army captains, a factor that may be remedied with continued exposure to the role.

The three dancers (Katy Frank, Maile Klein and Annette Bening) merit some special mention, although the Globe production company itself probably ought to get the notice. They don't dance much and they don't dance long but their costumes are diaphanous and caused nearly as much excitement among the theater crowd as did Timon.

That's a facet of Globe productions which becomes more and more a discernable trademark each season—a willingness, even an eagerness to experiment, to take chances, to throw away the "rules" when dealing with Shakespeare. As a result, audiences this season see a Timon that is unusual, in presentation, dramatic, in content, and thorough in impact on the senses.

This trademark is evident in virtually everything the Globe does. In its current stand, the company is also offering The Taming of the Shrew and Hamlet. The former has received high marks for its high comedy, but was not reviewed by this reporter. The Hamlet was.

Hamlet is, of a certainty, one of the most rewarding of theatrical experiences for audiences.

There is little to differentiate most mountings of this work, save for the quality of the performances. The Globe has changed all that.

In Hamlet's cleverly crafted playlet (used to unmask the slayer, of his father), the Globe has created one superb production within an already superb production. The use of all white costumes is a beautiful device, and the playlet is breathtakingly lit and staged.

The set for the play is bare, stark, yet amazingly castle-like. The illusion of Elsinore is well defined.

Performances of Timon will be presented at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday, Friday, Aug. 17, 20, 23, 25, 28 and 31, and Sept. 2, 3, 6, and 11. It will also be seen in matinee (2 p.m.) performances on Aug. 13, and 27 and on Sept. 10.

Performances of Hamlet will be presented at 8:30 p.m., tonight, Friday, Aug. 18, 21, 24, 26, 30, and Sept. 8 and 11. It will also be seen in matinee (2 p.m.) performances on Wednesday, Aug. 14, 17, 20, and 28 and on Sept. 4, 7 and 11.

Performances of Taming of the Shrew will be presented at 8:30 p.m., Tuesday, Thursday, Aug. 13, 14, 16, 19, 21 and Sept. 1, 4, 7, 9, and 10.

Sprague, Osbornes shine

By Jim Cox

Conductor Thomas Osborn was both precise and straightforward as he directed the fourth of this year's Summer Starlight Series concerts, Wednesday in Recreation Park.

Although his tempos were at times debatable, he had no trouble getting his Valley Youth Symphony to flow. His commands, fluid style left little room for variance on the part of the musicians. Aside from Osborn's discipline, the program of mostly popular compositions ably demonstrated the high quality of many of the symphony's performers.

In particular soloists Richard Sprague and Carolyn Osborne distinguished themselves.

Sprague played the solo in Johann Friedrich Fasch's trumpet concerto in D with confidence and skill. Using a piccolo trumpet, Sprague achieved a clear and sharp tone, while also showing intelligence and taste in his dynamics and phrasing.

Carolyn Osborne was given the assignment of the violin solo in Edouard Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole." The symphony is in fact a violin concerto.

written in five movements, of which only the first was played Wednesday.

Osborne experienced little difficulty with the technical aspect of the work. She is both quick and accurate. The only problem with her performance was the lack of dynamic shifting. She maintained a near constant level of volume, and was at times drowned by the orchestra.

The conductor opened the program in a light vein by playing the overture to Johann Strauss' "The Gypsy Baron." This atmosphere continued throughout the concert.

with the inclusion of the program of selections from the musicals "West Side Story" and "Oliver."

The most esoteric of the compositions played was Dmitri Kabalevsky's "The Comedians Suite," a series of 10 short musical sketches.

The orchestra ran into the most trouble in the second of the four dance movements which compose Bizet's L'Arlésienne Suite #1. The violins were muddy and had difficulty playing in tune.

The program closed in a very upbeat fashion, with Richard Hayman's "Pops Hoedown," a conglomerate of American folk and country tunes pieced together into a very lively orchestral package.

More heart, less action in last of Pusser series

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Amid the wave of sequels in today's film market, here's one with a self-destructing title: "Final Chapter—Walking Tall."

Obviously the third in this trio of highly successful movies will be the last. It takes the story of rural Sheriff Buford Pusser to his violent and somewhat mysterious death.

"We show the final day as it happened," says producer Charles Pratt. "Pusser's mother is convinced that he was murdered, but a private investigator could find no evidence."

"All we know is that he left the county fair, having his daughter ride with friends. What happened in the car crash must remain indefinite. There was a paid assassin at the county fair, and he had worked for Pusser's enemies. But there was no autopsy on Pusser, and we don't know how he died. So we show the accident but we don't show why it happened."

Buford Pusser was the McNairy County, Tenn., ex-Marine who attracted national attention by warring against the criminal element.

The killing of his wife by the underworld made him an implacable dealer of justice, sometimes with his own hands. He died on the highway in 1974, just before he was to portray himself in "Part 2 Walking Tall."

The first "Walking Tall," starring Joe Don Baker, struck a strong note with moviegoers concerned with law and order. After a slow start, it caught on with the aid of a changed ad campaign.

Produced for $1.5 million, the film grossed $60 million at the world's theaters, bringing $16.5 million to Bing Crosby Productions and its parent, Cox Broadcasting.

"The picture had an amazing record in this country, playing an unheard-of year in Little Rock and other cities," said Pratt. "It was great in all of Southeast Asia, Thailand, Hong Kong, The Philippines, sensational in South Africa. In France, England and Italy it was not as good."

"Part 2 Walking Tall," in which Bo

Svenson took over as Pusser, cost $1.7 million and grossed $40 million with rentals to the company of $11.5 million. The bill for the third film came to $1.85 million ("strictly due to inflation") and Pratt happily reported that sample returns in the 650 openings throughout the South indicated more business than "Part 2."

"Audiences seem to like 'Final Chapter' more," said the producer, who took his own survey at the southern openings. "It has more heart. The second film was all action."

The "Walking Tall's" are not without their critics. A trade paper reviewer termed the new one "the third and last of those tacky, hyper-violent celebrations of backwoods horsing around."

Pratt, a U.S. Cavalry scout in the South Pacific war, bristled at such a view.

"The new film isn't as violent as the first two," he replied. "At any rate, Buford Pusser led a violent, action-filled life. He had a point of view which might be considered 'vigilante' by some people. His theory was 'what's right is right, and what's wrong is wrong,' and he decided to do something about it."

"He was a simple man who did things his own way. When he caught some moonshiners, he didn't necessarily turn them in. He beat the hell out of them to give them a lesson. He adjudicated the law in his own way."

Chuck Pratt is president of Bing Crosby Productions (Bing sold out long ago) and has successfully steered the company through the 1960s of independent production. Since 1969, BCP has consistently shown a profit; thanks to such hits as "Walking Tall," "Willard," and "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud," the latter being Pratt's favorite.

"He's had dogs, too. A disappointment was 'Mean Dog Blues,' which Pratt expected to be another 'Cool Hand Luke.'"

"Mean Dog Blues" just didn't get the word-of-mouth," he theorized. "A picture's fate is determined when the first house empties out. If the people tell their friends to go see it, you've got a winner. If not, there's nothing you can do."

"I remember what Arthur Godfrey told me when I was in the advertising business: 'You can only sell a bad product once.'"

Festival Honors David Carradine

Combined News Services

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica—American actor David Carradine was chosen best actor in the first national Jamaica Film Festival for his portrayal of folk singer Woody Guthrie in the movie "Guthrie for Glory."

American actress Sheila Scott-Wilkinson was selected best actress for her performance in the Trinidadian movie "Pressure."

Some 50 documentaries and 12 feature films entered the week-long festival, which ended over the weekend with an awards presentation at the Rosehall Intercontinental Hotel, but neither Carradine nor Miss Scott-Wilkinson, who now lives in London, were present to receive their awards.

The best feature film award went to the Cuban presentation "Rancho Dor" whose director Sergio Gival won the award for best director of a feature film.

The Ethiopian movie "Harvest 3,000 Years" was chosen best documentary and its director Haile Gerima won the best director award in that category.

"There aren't enough superlatives to describe this sensational new film! Benji's acting performance is even better than in his first film."

ANITA SUMNER—FAMILY WEEKLY

"Two years ago I said Benji was the most entertaining family picture of our time. Maybe of all time. I was wrong. This one is better!"

BY SMITH—COCOA/SPIN

"I am not a fan of Grated movies but I loved this picture. Everything about it was superb and I'm looking forward to seeing it again."

JULIE ANDREWS TURNS DOWN HALF A MILLION

Knight News Service

Julie Andrews has turned down an offer of a half-million dollars plus 10 percent of the gross to star in MGM's sequel to "National Velvet," titled "International Velvet." Her producer-husband, Blake Edwards, turned down the same kind of money to direct an upcoming MGM film called "The Colonel."

Julie is committed to several concert dates. Blake is doing a movie with Burt Reynolds. In their spare time, they are writing a screen version of Julie's best-selling book "The Last of the Really Great Whangdoodles."

Scene in ABC movie about Ike said to have enraged Eisenhower family

By Jay Sharbutt

HOLLYWOOD — In Mel Shavelson's script of a planned ABC movie, "Ike: The War Years," there's a scene that reportedly outraged the family of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It showed President Harry S. Truman in 1952, burning two letters in the presence of his military aide, Harry H. Vaughn. One, written shortly after the end of World War II, was from then-Gen. Eisenhower. In it, Ike purportedly told his Army boss, Gen. George C. Marshall, he wanted to come home from Europe, divorce his wife, Mamie, and marry his wartime driver-secretary, Kay Summersby.

The other letter, from Marshall, purportedly tells Ike he'll "bust" him out of the Army if he goes through with the idea. The account of the letters is based on an interview Truman gave toward the end of his life to writer Merle Miller. Truman was quoted as saying he destroyed the letters, but how isn't specified.

Ike's son, John, in a coming collection of Ike's wartime letters to Mamie, some released to the Los Angeles Times last June, says the letters prove to him the divorce correspondence mentioned in Miller's book is an "egregious falsehood."

He also says there's "no evidence" Ike seriously considered divorce.

Problem is, nobody knows if the divorce letters exist. Vaughn says he retrieved for Truman some Eisenhower-Marshall letters, but neither read them nor saw Truman burn them.

Marshall's biographer, Dr. Forrest C. Pogue, is quoted as saying no divorce correspondence is among Marshall's papers and doubts such exists.

Which leaves veteran screenwriter Shavelson, 60, mulling over that controversial scene in his six-hour dramatization of Ike's war years, which ABC may air in 1978. No filming of it has begun yet.

Shavelson says the whole flap developed after the Eisenhower family, understandably protective of Mamie, saw the first draft of the screenplay he sent them and thought it was the version ABC would air.

"It was not," he said, emphasizing that there "never was any intent to blow that thing (the divorce letters account) into something distasteful."

The problem "was that at the time I was writing the first draft, none of this stuff had surfaced," he said, referring to the comments of Vaughn, Dr. Pogue and Ike's son about the purported letters.

He said he'd talked with John Eisenhower, and Ike's grandson, David, "to find out what the family sensitivity was" to mentioning the wartime romance Miss Summersby, now dead, claimed she'd had with Ike.

He declined to say what they told him, other than they felt the planned movie "had no meaning at all as far as Ike was concerned."

He also said the family didn't want to help him with the project.

L.B. school board approves $106.3-million budget

By Walt Murray
Staff Writer

A $106.3-million budget for 1977-78 was unanimously approved Friday by the Long Beach Board of Education as teacher salary talks broke down.

Before the board meeting, board representatives offered teachers a 5-percent pay hike that carried stipulations on future bargaining, which the teacher representatives rejected.

The budget sets the tax rate at $1.28 per $100 of assessed valuation, 16 cents less than last year.

While it appeared last month that there would be a 35-cent cut in the tax rate, final information from the county assessor's office reduced the savings to taxpayers, school officials said.

The officials added that while

Teachers reject 5% raise; talks break down

the budget carries a $5.7-million deficit, $3.6 million is from projects where income was received last year but expenditures will be made this year.

Expenditures for 1977-78 are estimated at $106.28 million. Income is estimated at $100.57 million.

The budget is $8 million higher than last year's.

Judith O. Powell, president of the Teachers Association of Long Beach (TALB), said she could not agree to the board's conditions for the 5-percent pay hike.

The board stipulated that formal collective bargaining not begin until next January and that the question of 1977-78 salaries not be reopened then.

Teachers would also have to agree to forego portions of the 5-percent pay hike or face program cuts if not enough money is available in future years to fund it without dipping into reserves, the board's proposal states.

Although rejecting the proposal, Mrs. Powell said TALB was open to compromise. TALB originally asked for a 10-percent hike.

Supt. Vern Hinze said it is uncertain how much money the school district will have for pay increases, since a school finance bill is still bogged down in the State Legislature.

Hinze said the board's 5-percent proposal would total 9.2 percent when fringe benefits are added.

Board Vice President Jerald S. Jacobs admonished teachers not to expect so much in pay hikes.

He said Long Beach teachers get the highest average salary in the state. Average pay is $17,747 plus $2,500 in fringe benefits, he said.

However, Mrs. Powell said the average is so high because Long Beach has such a large number of veteran teachers who are high on the pay scale.

In other action, the board unanimously approved a $27.15-million budget for Long Beach City College. Income is estimated at $27.49 million.

The budget sets the tax rate at 63.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, the same as last year. The budget is up $3.2 million over 1976-77.

At a public hearing on a proposed interim salary agreement by the California School Employees Association, City College President Frank Pearce said the CSEA plan amounted to a 25-percent increase in salaries and benefits that would cost $900,000.

He said he would present a counterproposal later and that another public hearing will be held on it. Formal bargaining will begin then.

Dan Lungren, an unsuccessful Republican candidate last year for the 34th Congressional District seat of Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, told the hearing that the CSEA request was "excessive."

It would increase pressure to raise property taxes, set a "fearful precedent" for future collective bargaining and increase inflation, he said.

Harriet Williams, former president of the Long Beach PTA Council, urged the board to reconsider its cuts in school nurse services planned next year. She said some nurses will have to look after as many as 2,000 youngsters each at four schools.

Pier job decision appealed

By Jack O. Baldwin
Maritime Editor

The Citizen's Task Force on Soho has appealed a South Coast Regional Coastal Commission decision to permit a $3-million modernization of Pier C by the Long Beach Harbor Department.

The main basis for the appeal is the allegation that the port has no master plan, according to Mike Dadasovich, port planner for the San Francisco-based State Coastal Commission, which will hear the appeal.

Other grounds listed by the task force include the prospective relocation of a fireboat station now at the end of Pier C and the lack of a vessel traffic control program.

The South Coast Regional Commission approved the harbor's Pier C modernization plan 9-0 during its meeting of July 18.

Members of the citizen's group were not available for comment.

James McJunkin, port general manager, said that modernizing the pier would preclude dredging and creation of expensive new land to handle increasing containerized cargo trade.

ASSISTANT Fire Chief E. E. Nagel said his department favors a new location for the fire station at the southern tip of Pier G—closer to the proposed Soho terminal and closer to the offshore oil islands by at least five minutes.

The Pier C proposal calls for the removal of an aging transit shed, additional paving and lighting, construction of a Ro-Ro (roll on-roll off) ramp and installation of two cranes to handle containerized cargos.

The present facilities on Pier C are geared to a bulk cargo handling process that is rapidly becoming obsolete, according to McJunkin.

The California Coastal Commission is scheduled to consider the appeal Sept. 7, probably in San Francisco, according to Dadasovich.

Bids sought to fit ships for sinking

The State Department of Fish and Game is seeking bids to prepare two World War II Liberty ships to be sunk to create artificial fishing reefs off Huntington Beach and Ventura.

"We may have to pay to have a ship prepared for sinking or we may get some money from a bidder to strip the ship before sinking," said Capt. Paul Petrich at the department headquarters in Long Beach.

An earlier bidding procedure conducted in June resulted in only one bid, and that from an unqualified bidder.

"A lot depends upon how the boat is equipped and on the price of scrap steel," the captain said.

He noted that one Liberty ship, the Palawan, is in a Terminal Island shipyard being readied for sinking in Santa Monica Bay. Last year the state agency received a bid of $67,700 for the right to strip machinery off the Palawan, which had been converted to a repair ship and had considerable machine shop equipment aboard.

Kids wrestle with camp life

By Tim Burt
Staff Writer

It was time for arm wrestling at Lakewood's Camp Tomahawk.

Eight-year-old Harold Suggs viewed the field of potential opponents and pointed to the young blonde who was waiting to be matched up.

"I want her!" he shouted.

Eventually, Harold lost his match—but not without a struggle. The other youngsters didn't hesitate to remind him that he had lost to a girl.

Harold was one of 45 youngsters attending the week-long session at Monte Verde Park.

He and the other kids, aged 7-9, also painted scenes in Indian themes, worked at crafts and rehearsed Indian dances in preparation for the big show that climaxes the week.

"Just about everything we do is in preparation for that," said Dennis Anderson, Lakewood recreation supervisor. "All of the parents, grandparents and friends come to watch the show. The kids dress up and do Indian dances."

"Some kids compete in archery, and others participate in arm and leg wrestling."

The youngsters also help make a stew consisting of meat and vegetables to serve to the visitors, Anderson said.

"We also spend one day at the beach or some other site, such as the El Dorado Nature Center, where the kids learn about the environment," he said.

The youngsters are divided into three tribes, rotating to different activities each day.

Camp Director Tom La Roquette is assisted by Judy Zall and Chris Peterson. The camp, now in its 14th year, is funded through $10 registration fees.

Connie Skoczylas, a 9-year-old Long Beach resident, said she wouldn't have wanted to live on a reservation in the past.

"It was hard to get food then. They had to go out and hunt animals to get food," she said.

Eight-year-old Todd Leaf of Lakewood said, "I wouldn't like being an Indian then, but I like being it right now."

And several other youngsters said they have enjoyed the camp.

Their major disappointment came on a fishing expedition.

"When we were catching fish, the bird flew in and got the fish which was our fish," one said.

Veteran who got new heart so wife could get benefits, 'feels just great'

By Mary Nelswender
Staff Writer

"You can't imagine how I feel... eight months ago I didn't have a chance in the world."

"Now, I don't know how much time I have... they won't tell me... but I feel great—just great."

Fifty-four-year-old Raymond Gomez has lived through a lot as a member of a migrant farm family, as a soldier in World War II and Korea and now Stanford Medical Center's 115th heart transplant.

He's survived them all, including a fight with the Legislature—at the height of his heart problems—to assure that his wife received survivor's benefits from his 20 years of military service.

His fight to win a heart transplant in order to live six months so that his wife Lilia would receive military survivor's benefits, if he died was described in these newspapers last September. (Because they had divorced once, then remarried, authorities insisted their second marriage had to be two years old before the benefits would be paid.)

"I knew that once I got on that table—to be wheeled into the operating room—I would make it," the former Air Force master

Another in a Saturday series about people who made the news and what they are doing now

sergeant said recently as he relaxed in his Paramount home. "I had faith in God and in the medics."

Gomez was operated on by heart transplant pioneer Dr. Robert Shumway at the Northern California facility on Thanksgiving Day last year. Earlier that month he had moved from the Long Beach area to Santa Cruz to be nearer the hospital on the chance that a heart might become available for transplant.

It did and, with less than 24 hours notice, his failing heart was replaced.

There was no pain after the operation, Gomez says, and within three days he was up and walking. Within two months he was out of the hospital assigned to an outpatient facility and last week he came home.

"The shots they give when the body starts rejecting the heart are the worst problem. They're painful. I took about 100 of them... those things would make any man cry."

In the process of fending off rejection of the implanted heart, Gomez said he had 16 heart biopsies.

"They feel they aren't getting the real picture from the EKGs (electrocardiograms) so they go down into the heart and take two or three pieces out to send to the lab to check. It's really a painless process, and twice they caught rejections that way."

The only problem, Gomez says, developed when he caught a virus which destroyed the top half of his right eye before it was stopped.

Gomez had a massive heart attack while working at a cement plant in Santa Cruz—after he retired from the service—which left him with a deteriorating heart.

Gomez, who lives with his wife, Lilia, at 16710 Orange Ave., Paramount, maintains he doesn't know, because of hospital policy, whose heart he now has—only that it is from a 36-year-old man.

Now, with the new heart, Gomez says he's driving and only has to regain the strength in his legs.

After Tijuana jail beating

Informant given 'protection'

TIJUANA (AP) — U.S. Consul General Robert Kent has asked protection for an American drug informant beaten severely by fellow inmates in the Tijuana jail, where he is held on charges of murder.

Frank Jensen, 43, of Wisconsin, told a San Diego Evening Tribune reporter that he accidentally killed Maria Cano Zamora, 28, during an intended drug raid at her Tijuana home Monday night.

When fellow inmates found out he was an informant for Mexican federal judicial police he was beaten Wednesday night.

"All night long the prisoners here have been beating on me," Jensen, in tears, told reporter Laurie Becklund in a jail interview. "About 30 of them took turns last night, banging my head against the bars, burning me with hot drinks."

A guard who saw it just laughed," Jensen added. "They said they would kill me if they got a chance."

Tijuana Police Chief Antonio Escobedo said Jensen was being given medical treatment for cuts and bruises following the jail incident. The police chief said he had received a request from the American consulate asking protection for Jensen, and he promised the American would be kept separate from other inmates in the future.

In the interview, Jensen told the reporter he had thought Mrs. Zamora had been dealing in drugs because he saw packages that appeared to contain drugs in a car outside her home.

He said he called Mexican federal police in his capacity as a drug informant and told them to meet him at the house and that he was going to enter the building.

Jensen said he fired three warning shots from his .32-caliber pistol because the woman appeared to be holding a weapon. One shot hit her in the head and killed her instantly.

She was the mother of two children. No drugs and no weapon were found in Mrs. Zamora's possession, police said.

Jensen said he left Wisconsin 12 years ago and came to Tijuana, where he found work as a laborer. He added he had been an informant for the Mexican federal judicial police for only 10 days, after somebody "fingered" him as a drug smuggler.

Previously, he said, he had received pay for informing to American authorities, although the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration said it had no record of Jensen as an informant.

400 parents, elderly urge rent control

Associated Press

Four hundred senior citizens and parents Friday voiced hearty support of rent control, then shared personal accounts of sharp rent hikes and alleged discrimination.

The elderly told their stories at a public hearing on tenant-landlord problems conducted by Assemblyman Herschel Rosen, D-Los Angeles, and the State Department of Consumer Affairs.

Several witnesses at the Fairfax Senior Citizens Club in Los Angeles recounted instances of rent increases of up to $150 a month and examples of landlords refusing to rent to families with children.

A Beverly Hills woman testified that in her apartment building a room with a hot plate now rents for $275 a month. It previously had a monthly rent of $120.

In another apartment, she said, the rent jumped from $145 to $275 a month.

Lorraine Despres of Fair Housing for Children said she is "kept out of 70 to 80 per cent of the housing units in Los Angeles because I am a mother living with a child."

Rent control advocate Tina Tomash, a senior citizen, shouted, "I'm a prisoner in my own home because I'm afraid to raise my voice to my landlord for fear she might raise the rent."

Girl raped, man beaten, 2 jailed

A 17-year-old English girl was raped and a young Englishman was beaten after they fell asleep in their car parked in Compton early Friday, police said.

Two suspects were arrested. According to investigators, Glyn Goodship, 22, and the girl had stopped near Long Beach Boulevard and Pauline Street about 3 a.m.

Two young men who rode up on bicycles awakened them. One of the youths, armed with a pistol, entered the car.

Goodship was ordered to drive to a location several blocks away. The second youth followed with the bicycles.

Goodship told police he was thrown out of the car and beaten, the bicycles were hidden under nearby bushes and the pair drove off with the girl.

Goodship knocked on the doors of several homes before a resident allowed him to call the Lynwood sheriff's station.

The girl was driven to Torrance, and she contacted police there after the assailants left her about 5 a.m.

Deputies who had been staked out near the bicycles arrested Wayne E. Butler, 18, of 11 E. 89th Way, Long Beach, and Stanley Pitts, 19, of Los Angeles, at that location about 6:30 a.m.

Aide pleads guilty in theft of LBSU cash

The former Associated Students business manager at Long Beach State University has pleaded guilty to grand theft charges in the loss of $13,700 in student funds, authorities said.

W. Jeffrey Lakes, 34, of Los Angeles, will be sentenced Oct. 4 in Long Beach Superior Court, Deputy Dist. Atty. Arthur Jean said. Lakes, free on $2,500 bail, pleaded guilty Thursday after reaching an agreement with the district attorney's office aimed at avoiding a state prison sentence for the former student officer.

Jean said Lakes could be sentenced for up to one year in county jail or the sentencing judge could entirely reject the agreement.

Third meeting the next day, where he carried concealed recording equipment.

Gillissie testified that he and other officers arrested Herrman outside his apartment at 925 Cherry Ave. shortly after Herrman had given Richardson a $100 bill as a down payment.

The prosecution alleges the motive of the desired murders was to forestall an unfavorable court hearing on a pending divorce action by Herrman's wife; to prevent her woman friend from testifying against him, and to "just get rid" of their two men friends.

Witness to slaying later shot

A 21-year-old Long Beach fugitive, sought by police as a suspect in a shotgun slaying early Thursday, apparently struck again later that day, seriously wounding a man who witnessed the first shooting, officers reported Friday.

Witnesses told police Dennis McCormell, 1862 Olive Ave., calmly walked into an apartment at 828 E. 20th St. and shot Robert Sheard, 45, in the left shoulder with a shotgun at 8:40 p.m., officers said.

Sheard was listed in stable condition at St. Mary Medical Center.

Homicide detectives identified McCormell as the suspect in the shooting death of Glenore Nelson Jr., 20, of 3019 Artesia Blvd., Apt. 5, at 3:30 a.m. Thursday.

Nelson was asleep on a sofa at 2285 Lewis Ave. when McCormell, according to witnesses, walked in and fired a shotgun at Nelson's head, police said.

Sheard told police that he saw the Nelson shooting and, after the shooting, refused to give McCormell a ride.

Hitchhiking woman raped

A 19-year-old Los Angeles woman told Long Beach police Friday she was robbed and raped after she accepted a ride from a stranger in central Long Beach, police said.

The woman, who said she consented to the attack after the man choked her, was reported in good condition after a medical examination, police said.

The woman said she was hitchhiking about 12:20 p.m. to a downtown Long Beach restaurant when a man offered a ride at Pacific Coast Highway and Long Beach Boulevard. She said that after she refused to consent to a sex act, he drove to an alley where the attack occurred.

She said she was thrown out of the car after her attacker took the $12 in her purse.

Gag 'permanent' in killings case

RIVERSIDE (AP) — A Superior Court judge signed a permanent gag order Friday preventing out-of-court statements by attorneys, investigators, court officials and witnesses in the so-called "trash bag" multiple murder case against Patrick W. Kearney.

Judge Gerald F. Schulte issued the order at the request of Kearney's attorney, Jay Grossman, to replace a temporary order handed down last week.

Grossman told the judge the order was necessary because of "the prejudicial publicity which has been disseminated by the press." He said, "I must protect my client's right to a fair trial."

Kearney has been charged with investigation of murder in the slaying of three young men and dumping their dismembered bodies in Riverside County. He has pleaded innocent to all three counts and is scheduled for trial Oct. 5.

Before signing the order, Schulte said he had some "basic concerns" about it. "I question the necessity of the order, the power of this court to enforce it and the legality of such things," he said.

But after a 30-minute open court discussion, Schulte met with Grossman and Deputy Dist. Atty. A. Dan Bacalski for 40 minutes in chambers. The judge returned to announce he had signed the order and offered no explanation for his apparent change of mind.

Bacalski had argued that Grossman's motion was too sweeping, requiring every witness in the case to be told of the gag order when they are subpoenaed. "I cannot be responsible for all the statements made by every potential witness in this case," Bacalski said.

The job was 4 murders, the pay $500, court told

The job was four murders and the price was $500, according to testimony of a Long Beach police officer Friday.

Officer Robert Gillissie said he recorded this transaction in a restaurant parking lot from a wired-for-sound, supposed "hit man" who discussed murder for hire, with the man accused of soliciting it.

Ronald L. Herrman, 37, is charged with soliciting a man once married to his sister to murder his wife, Charlotte; her friend, Marcie Carpenter, and two unnamed men friends of the two women.

At the conclusion of testimony in the preliminary hearing, Municipal Court Judge W.H. Winston Jr. ordered Herrman held for Long Beach Superior Court trial at 9 a.m., Aug. 19.

Under questioning by Deputy Dist. Atty. Vince Lakamoto, Robert E. Richardson, 38, testified he was twice approached by Herrman to do the job with gun and knife.

"He said he wanted his wife cut up bad before I shot her," Richardson said.

After a second meeting last July 11, Richardson testified, he went to the police and was instructed by Gillissie to set up a third meeting the next day, where he carried concealed recording equipment.

Gillissie testified that he and other officers arrested Herrman outside his apartment at 925 Cherry Ave. shortly after Herrman had given Richardson a $100 bill as a down payment.

The prosecution alleges the motive of the desired murders was to forestall an unfavorable court hearing on a pending divorce action by Herrman's wife; to prevent her woman friend from testifying against him, and to "just get rid" of their two men friends.
